THIS MAGAZINE OF TRAVEL.

This is the attractive title of the newest candidate for public favor in the field of periodical literature. The subject of travel naturally appeals to all, and when, as in the case of the initial number of the Magazine of Travel, it is treated by able pens, and in the most entertaining manner, it reaches a degree of interest that is at once irresistible and all-absorbing. So well chosen are the varied contents of the number before us that there is no suggestion of dryness or monotony. The most interesting regions of Europe and America are drawn on for materials, and when these are woven into narrative and sketch and story and poetry, by such minds as Hon. Chauncey M. Depew, Hon. Theo. Roosevelt, Chas. Terhune Herriek, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Charles D. Lister, Frank Chaffin, and others equally well known in their respective fields, they should bring instant and marked success to the publication which gives so valuable a contribution to the world's choicest literature. The editor of the Magazine of Travel is Mr. E. H. Talbot, the founder of the "Railway Age," and the home of the publication is at 10 Astor Place, New York.

The purchase of the Oregon Pacific Railway by Messrs. Bonner and Hammond is doubtless in pursuance of the general design formed by these gentlemen and their associates for the development of the mouth of the Columbia river. It will be remembered that this road as originally projected and surveyed, extends from Yaquina across the central wheat belt of Oregon and connects with the Union Pacific system at Huntington. The entire line has been laid out, and the rails placed in position through all the principal mountain passes between Huntington and the Cascade range; the rails and other materials being transported thither on the backs of mules, in order, it is said, that the right of way might be protected from lapsing pending the negotiation of the money required to finish the entire construction, but the only portion of the road completed by its projectors was the section from the Cascades westward. There is good reason to believe the receiver's sale will be confirmed by the court, and all these improvements—representing the expenditure of several millions of dollars—with the valuable franchise for the whole undertaking, will pass into the hands of Bonner & Hammond, for the nominal consideration of $250,000. The building of the short extension through the rich coal fields and inexhaustible timber of the Nehalem to the deep water of Astoria's harbor will surely follow, and thus Oregon's great seaport is to obtain the almost simultaneous benefit of a connection with two independent transcontinental lines of railway.

London controls the wool markets of the world, as Liverpool does the wheat and France the olive vines. Wools are shipped from all parts of the world to London for sale. The wools are usually sent to what Americans would call commission houses, but here the American commission houses, for all wools are then turned over to the wool brokers to sell. These wool brokers hold auction sales about eleven times a year, when there are offered for sale from 10,000 to 15,000 bales per day. The sales usually last 14 days thus offering at such sale of 14 days from 40,000,000 to 60,000,000 pounds. The sales average about 200 pounds each. Thus in one year over 500,000,000 pounds are sold. There are about 300 wool brokers who form a sort of stock exchange, and every day during the sales meet at 4 p. m. where the wools are sold to the highest bidder. Consignees of the wools to be sold that day are lined, and the wools are carefully shown in well-lighted warehouses, meeting 14 acres. The wools for each day's sale are shown on that day, and the sales are not made until the day after the sale is held. Every bale is carefully examined, the bales being arranged in long lines, two bales high. The last London wool sales opened on November 23d, with 11,500 bales offered. The sales, much to the surprise of the buyers, opened at a marked decline of from 7 1/2 to 10 per cent from closing price of last sales.

It is not likely that the restoration to power of Prince Kung will effect any amelioration in the situation of the empire. He is too old for the crisis, and possessed the commanding abilities of his great rival, Li Hung Chang. His call to the direction of affairs is simply a passing expedient rising out of the desperate nature of the situation, and the security of Chinese statesman fit to cope with such an emergency. There is every sign that the present dynasty draws to a close, and that new rulers and new men must hereafter shape the destinies of that great, but benighted and palsied people. When its lethargy is shaken off and it follows the example of Japan in adopting the modern code of industrial, commercial and military customs, a new and great career will open before it. But this is not to be looked for from the statesmanship of Prince Kung, not even if he succeeds in making his son emperor, as now seems probable.

The abolition of the tax on state bank currency might be a benefit to such great states as Pennsylvania, New York and Massachusetts, and the money issued by them could be circulated with a reasonable degree of confidence, but strange to say, these states are entirely satisfied with the present system, and it is only such insignificant states as Alabama, Mississippi and other Southern states without any credit and who do no business to amount to anything, that demand the repeal of the tax.

College men are discussing the football situation thoroughly, and are trying to devise some way of eliminating the brutal features from the game. If the referees and umpires would simply enforce the rules, the annual complaint against the brutality of the sport would soon be a thing of the past.

The Carlisle currency plan is said by good Democratic authority to be nothing more than an ingeniously contrived scheme to totally destroy the national banking system.

Rev. Dr. S. D. McConnell, rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal church, Philadelphia, has startled many Episcopalians by approving most of the conclusions of modern biblical criticism of an address delivered by him the other Sunday. He argued that people no longer believe the Bible to be a transcript of God's revelation. Discredit is thrown upon the theory of literal inspiration by the investigation and discoveries of modern scholars.

Rev. Dr. Joseph Parker, of the City Temple, London, recently bartered the newspapers for religious his sermons, on the ground that he is unable to use them again or sell them. His sermon has provoked considerable sarcastic comment. He ought to have sent the reverend doctor at least three shillings free.

"ROCK ME TO SLEEP, MOTHER."

The poem, "Rock Me to Sleep, Mother," was written by Elizabeth Akers Allen, known otherwise as "Florence Percy." It is a general favorite, for it is a sweet little touch of home life. But there is another side to the picture. Many a mother rocks her child to sleep who can neither rest nor sleep herself. She is always tired, has an everlasting headache, is low spirited, weary, nervous, and all that. Thanks be, she can be cured. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will do the work. There is nothing on earth like it for the "complaints" to which the sex are liable. Once used, it is always in favor.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets are specific for biliousness, headache, constipation, piles and all kindred ailments.
