BLOODSHED AT HAWAII.

Royalist Uprising Near Honolulu on the 11th.

COMMISSIONER CARTER KILLED.

Twelve Natives Killed, 200 Captured and Many Wounded—The Government Victorious.

Associated Press.

San Francisco, Jan. 18.—The steamer Alameda arrived from Auckland and Sydney via Honolulu this afternoon and brings news of revolution and bloodshed at Honolulu. Charles L. Carter, who was one of the annexation commissioners, was killed and several government supporters wounded. There has been much fighting, and at least twelve natives have been killed. Nearly 200 royalists are under arrest. Robert Wilcox is the leader of the rebels. The fighting was still in progress when the Alameda left Honolulu, January 11th, but the government forces had practically overcome the revolutionists.

The Associated Press has the following correspondence:

Honolulu, Jan. 11th.—There were no fresh developments in the threatened uprising until last Sunday afternoon, the 6th inst., when Deputy Marshal Brown and a squad of police under Capt. Parker left for the beach at Waikeiki with orders to search the premises of Henry Bertelmann, a prominent royalist, for arms and ammunition. On approaching the house the deputy marshal left the squad on the lawn while he entered the house, and finding Bertelmann and strange white men there proceeded to read his warrant. When about half through, shots were heard from the rear of the house. Brown rushed out to join his squad, and Charles L. Carter shouted, "There they are, under the boatshed, pointing to a shed in the rear of the lot, and rushing forward. At that instant a volley was fired by a crowd of natives under the shed, and Charles Carter and Lieut. Holt fell wounded. The police charged and drove the natives out on the beach, whence they retreated to the brush, keeping up a desultory fire. As the police only numbered eight, and there were three or four times as many natives, they returned to the house, taking with them three of the rebels who had been captured in the melee, during which some 60 shots were fired. They searched the prisoners, placing Bertelmann also under arrest. By this time the rebels regained their courage and surrounded the house, firing into it repeatedly. Leaving one man to guard the prisoners, the officers returned the fire but without effect, as their assailants could not be seen. Realizing that their case was desperate, word was sent to headquarters in this city. The natives were advancing on the house to take it by storm, when one of the officers told Bertelmann he would blow his brains out the instant the first man inside the house was hurt. Bertelmann called to the natives outside to that effect, and they at once withdrew and ceased firing.

Within two minutes after receiving a telephone account of the fight, a detail of thirty-two men of the regulars stationed at the government building was ordered out under Lieut. King. Volunteers were called for, and nearly every man in the barracks stepped to the front. Within ten minutes the detail was on its way as fast as horses and wheels could carry them, the distance being about four miles. As soon as they appeared within shooting distance of the scene of action, the natives fired a parting volley and fled. Charles Carter received medical attendance. It was found he was shot in the breast twice, and once in the left lobe of the breast, the wounds ranging downwards and entering the abdomen. He died early the next morning. Holt's wound was through the breast, but not necessarily fatal. The Japanese servant denied there were arms in the house, but a six shooter at his ear induced him to bring to light several rifles and pistols. At daylight Monday a large force of natives who had taken up a strong position on the slope of Diamond Head, renewed the attack. After standing five an hour and finding the natives had the advantage of numbers and position, Lieut. King moved his forces to Sans House, a pleasure resort a few hundred yards nearer town with telephone connection.

In a short time after the telephone was used, Lieut. Coyne and twenty-five more regulars were sent out. The number of the insurgents was variously estimated at from one to two hundred. With Coyne's force was sent an eight-centimeter field piece. President Murray, of the citizens' guard, with 25 special and ten mounted police, were sent out on the road leading to the rear of the insurgents. They met with no resistance until they reached Paio Valley, over the ridge of which a stone wall extends, and behind which a large body of insurgents with a small howitzer were established. The first intimation Murray's forces had of the enemy, was a shower of bullets and scarping which did no harm. They retreated a short distance and established and fortified a camp, and established telephone communication with Lieut. King, the object being to prevent any possible escape.

Between 8 and 9 p. m. the appearance of squads of the citizens' guard at the Onay street corner, told the tale. The people were quietly warned to go home and stay there. Every important avenue was guarded by squads numbering from 20 to 40 members of this body, leaving the entire police and military force at the immediate disposal of the government. In the morning at 9:30, martial law was proclaimed, and all saloons and liquor stores closed.

At noon Captain Murray and Capt. Zeigler and a company of regulars were dispatched to the scene, taking with them an Austrian field piece. A ten-pound shell from this gun scattered the natives in every direction, but did not seem to hurt any of them. At 2 p. m. the troops advanced and forced the rebels into the brush. Lieut. Ludwig and ten men being detailed for a flank movement. As soon as Ludwig got into position the natives were beaten and scattered into the dense brush, followed by the troops. It is certain that many of them were wounded there, as blood, shreds of clothing, etc., were seen everywhere. The only man wounded on the government side was Ludwig, who received a slight flesh wound in the thigh. Here the first prisoners were taken, seven in number, and from them it was learned that the leaders of the rebels were Sam Woiwile, formerly colonel of the queen's household guards, and Robert Wilson, who was leader of the revolution in 1871. The other prominent ones being half rebels, formerly in the service of the queen. After the first surrender, the natives came dropping into the government camp in bunches, until there were more prisoners than troops. The prisoners claimed they had 600 rifles, but only 50 men were armed. At 6 p. m. the government forces camped for the night, pursuit being impossible in the dense brush.

While this was going on, the tug Elean, with a field piece and a detail of sharpshooters, left Honolulu, and in half an hour was in position to shell from the rear the natives whose camp, fronted Lieut. King's command. A few well directed shots scattered them like sheep, one shot falling directly into the native camp. It is known that five men were killed here, and a large number wounded. The natives were pursued by Lieut. Coyne's company. A shot from his field piece scattered the crowd who appeared on the edge of the center, and four dead bodies were the result. Thirty-six rifles, two 100-pound boxes of cartridges, and two dynamite bombs were found in the improvised fort. From statements of the natives captured, it was ascertained that the captain of the little steamer Waimanalo was responsible for the landing of the arms with which the natives were supplied. The entire crew was arrested.

The mate confessed, and when confronted with his testimony, the captain also acknowledged his guilt. During the day a large number of prominent royalists were arrested. The government forces pursued the rebels into Maonoa valley Wednesday, where several skirmishes took place, two rebels being killed and a number taken prisoners. Robert Wilcox and a band of thirty are hemmed in, and it is believed they will soon be captured.

HEAVY SNOWS.

A Passenger Train Caught in a Snow Slide.

Denver, Jan. 18.—Reports from the western slopes of the Rockies indicate the snow fall during the past 24 hours has been one of the heaviest ever known. At Outry, Silverton and Telluride there is three feet of snow on the level, and traffic is completely blocked. In places the snow has drifted 20 feet deep. A snow slide near Telluride caught the Rio Grande Southern passenger train, and the car windows were broken and engine cab covered. Engineer Andrew Fisher had a narrow escape.

BLOCKADE ON THE CENTRAL.

Rego, Jan. 18.—Snow is falling and drifting heavily, with no signs of abatement. No trains from the west since Wednesday, and three passenger trains from the east are blocked at Truckee. All the available snow plows and rotaries are bucking snow in the mountains. A passenger train is in the drifts between Blue Canyon and the Summit. Virginia and Truckee trains are blocked.

POPOORN SOCIAL.

The popoorn social held at the residence of Dr. Bushong last evening was an unequalled success. There were about one hundred persons in attendance, all of whom entered heartily into the games and other amusements which were provided in abundance. The happy conversation and merry laughter were interrupted only long enough to listen to an excellent literary and musical program which was rendered in a manner bringing great credit to those having the social in charge. The main attraction of the evening, however, was the popoorn, served in various ways to suit the individual taste. Time passed all too quickly for the participants in the pleasures of the evening, but all departed feeling very grateful for the enjoyment afforded.

Better AND Cheaper.

THE ROYAL BAKING POWDER is more economical than other brands because of its greater leavening strength, as shown by both the U. S. and Canadian Government Reports.

The other baking powders contain from 20 to 80 per cent. less leavening gas than the ROYAL. So the ROYAL, even should it cost more than the others, would be much the cheaper.

In addition to this the superior flavor, sweetness, wholesomeness and delicacy of the food raised by ROYAL BAKING POWDER would make any difference in cost insignificant.

Highest of all in leavening strength.—
