THE HONOLULU TROUBLE

It is unlikely that the so-called Honolulu revolution reported in last night's dispatches was a very serious affair, so far as any danger of overthrow to the existing government is concerned, but it goes to prove the truth of the statements so often made by newspaper correspondents and others who have had opportunity for personal observation, that the government if not insecure, maintains its authority only by a system of constant vigilance, and the prompt ferreting out and suppressing of numerous plots for a general uprising among the more ignorant natives which continue to be formed by a class of foreigners still hoping for the restoration of the queen.

The matter will doubtless serve as a pretext for the revival of much unfavorable criticism of President Cleveland's policy of indifference towards the young republic, and the probability that she may be driven to seek some form of alliance with England in order to obtain that international standing and community of interest so essential to the success and permanence of all newly organized nations or governments of whatever form.

THE DEMOCRATIC PLAIN

Republicans block the way, but propose nothing. They show how bad every measure is that Democrats attempt to pass, but suggest nothing better. Such is the babyish complaint of some of the journals and of incompetents at Washington. But it is false, says the New York Tribune. The Republicans have shown for thirty years how the treasury can be protected from danger, how the currency can be made sound, and how industry can be made prosperous. Nothing is necessary except to leave Republican laws alone. The man who insist upon repealing or altering those laws, to suit their own ignorant notions or malignant prejudices, must themselves face the responsibility of making changes, destructive or otherwise. They do not know how, to be sure. But why need they try?

Here is a monetary system that has stood unshaken through all the financial storms of many years, and has been growing safer and stronger every year except as it has been modified or threatened by Democratic, Silver, or Populist opposition. The men who propose to change it ought, in common decency, to be required to submit something radically better and at least equally safe. But instead they insist on smashing the system which Republicans have framed, and which many years of experience have justified, and then while because Republicans will not show them how to do that thing safely.

Here is a tariff system which has helped the country to the greatest development ever known in any land or any age. Modified a little in the direction of Democratic theories in 1885, it worked less wholesomely. Modified again in 1890, in the direction of more vigorous protection, it realized benefits quite unprecedented. The men who overturned it were, with perfect justice, compelled by the Republicans to take the entire responsibility of providing a better system. They tried, and with the aid of sugar speculators and a corrupt fund made a new tariff, and now they whine because Republicans are not ready to help them doctor it.
