THE DISTRIBUTION OF WHALTH.

The critics of existing social and inhands of the few, at the expense of the made for differences of personal abillegislation, it would soon be changed by the operation of irresistible forces, The exceptionally rich men constitute only a small portion of the total population, and their combined fortunes only a relative portion of the total wealth. They lose their importance light of proportion, and for the purpose of determining average facts and conditions in the country at large.

It is shown by the report of the comptroller of the currency that the deposits in the national banks amount to $1,647,017,129, and that the number of depositors is 1,920,280. The deposits in the savings banks of the country amount to $1.747,961,280 and the depositors number 4,777,687. Then there are building associations with assets valued at $528,852,000, and share holders numbering 1,755,725. Taking all of these together, and calculating that each individual depositor or share-holder rep- sing the fewest laws is the one that resents a family of five persons, we have a total of $3,923,830,409, belonging to 8,452,752 citizens, who stand for at least two thirds of all the people of the United States; and the figures would was $5,280,334, making an aggregate of be considerably larger if the deposits of the ordinary local banks were included.
