RULE OR RUIN.

These advocates of what they call the "remonetization" or the "rehabilitation" of silver propose to take every possible advantage of the financial emergency to further their policy, and if that cannot prevail, they intend that nothing else shall. The embarrassments of the treasury, the credit of the government, the security of the business of the country against worse panic and more disastrous depression than it has yet experienced, have no weight with these men against their demand that silver be restored to the position it occupied before 1873. Appeals to them of whatever nature are utterly futile; facts and arguments exert no influence. Firmly settled upon the proposition that the government must resume the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the existing legal ratio, they are determined to surrender no part of their policy and to accept no compromise. And they are strong enough to carry out their purpose. United they can defeat any financial proposition that is not satisfactory to them, and knowing this, they are very sure to be united.

The attitude of the free silver men is not only an insurmountable obstacle to any legislation for the relief of the treasury by this congress, but it is likely to be also in the next congress, if maintained until that time. The advocates of the free and unlimited coinage of silver in the senate of the next congress will be more numerous than in the senate at present. The vacancies to be filled in that body will be occupied by men who are committed to this policy. They will therefore be in a stronger position than now to dictate terms. The house of representatives, with its overwhelming republican majority, from which the country would reasonably expect sound and safe financial legislation, will not be able to accomplish anything if the band of free silver senators hold together in their determination to force their policy upon the country. And there is every reason to apprehend that they will hold together. They believe that their opportunity is at hand; that out of the business distress and the difficulties and embarrassments of the national treasury, they can achieve the result for which they have been patiently laboring, and they are encouraged in this by the suggestions of compromise proceeding from sources hitherto hostile to them.

It is an extremely unfortunate and perplexing situation. The worst possible construction will be given it abroad, to the increasing detriment of our public and private credit. Foreign investors in American securities and properties will see in it a surer and stronger tendency toward a silver basis and will be more eager than ever to withdraw capital from this country and realize on our securities. The outflow of gold will go on, with damaging effect upon financial confidence at home. Greater business depression will naturally follow. The free silver fanaticism has already wrought immeasurable harm, but it seems to threaten still greater injury before it has run its course. The duty of the friends of sound money to stand by their guns was never more urgent than now.

With singular indifference to an interesting and valuable contribution to the literature of their cause, says an exchange, the free silver fellows say nothing about a recent experience of the state of Idaho. Two years ago its legislature passed a law declaring gold and silver on an equality in the payment of debt, notwithstanding any objection in the contract. The result in the state was exactly what it would be, in a similar case, in the nation. Capital went out of the state, and new investments could not be procured. It was no help to silver or to any other interest, and the present legislature has repealed it without a word of objection from any quarter. And with these object-lessons passing continually before our eyes, the clamor for free coinage will wearies heaven.

A Washington correspondent writes his paper that one of the conservative Democratic senators, a gold man, has predicted that the silver cohorts would absolutely control the next Democratic national convention. "They will not only control it," he prophesied, "but they will make it a silver convention, name a silver candidate, and make a silver platform. The future Democratic party will be a silver party, and its habitat will be the South and West. The Republicans are going to try to hold position as the gold standard party, with just enough leaning toward bimetalism to keep the northwestern states in line. As for the gold standard Democrats, like myself, I suppose we may go to the devil along with the country."

In the death of Mr. I. W. Case Astoria loses a citizen whose place will be hard to fill. Few, either among the living or dead, have contributed more or so much to the city's substantial good, and not a few of our leading business men, besides scores of humbler people, have cause to remember him as both benefactor and friend. It is a sad recollection that the business reverses which crushed and broke Mr. Case's spirit, and finally resulted in his sudden and untimely end, might have been averted but for unkept obligations of others and the advantage taken of his well-known leniency and faith in his fellow-men.

Thoughts for Fishermen

On a dark, stormy night, when the tide is ebbing fast and the hardy fisherman finds it almost impossible to handle his net, has he ever stopped to think, should it become caught on a snag, what brand of twine would stand the greatest strain? Did he ever ask his brother fishermen what sort of twine they used? If so in nine cases out of ten, if they be successful fishermen, the answer has been "MARSHALL'S TWINE."

It is the ONLY Brand of Twine to use.
