THE SONS OF HERMANN. Their Annual Hop Last Evening a Grand Success.

Scores of Masqueraders Presented an Odd and Interesting Sight.

The Sons of Hermann gave their annual ball last night in Fisher's Hall, and besides a large number of spectators present, about 90 couples were dancing.

The hall was tastefully decorated and Utzinger's orchestra rendered most excellent music for the occasion.

During the early part of the evening there was a perfect jam about the door, and when the masqueraders started the grand march they had a comparatively limited space in which to maneuver.

There were scores of funny characters represented, some of them in a most excellent manner; but aside from the winning costumes play will not permit a mention. Refreshments were served during the evening and it goes without saying that no one went away hungry.

This excellent order includes in its membership the very best German element in the city, and their annual social hops are always looked forward to with keen delight. As enter-tainers no other people excel them, as was plainly evident from the manner in which the big crowd enjoyed themselves last night and far into the morning.

Following is a list of the prizes awarded for the best sustained characters, also the names of those to whom the prizes were awarded:

Ladies' First Prize—Miss Rosie Pen-nell, school girl; silver tea set.

Ladies' Second Prize—Mrs. Captain Brown, Manila Girl; silver cake dish.

Ladies' Third Prize—Miss Maggie O'Leary, Free Silver; silver Pickle Dish.

Gent's First Prize—Jack Rife, Rag Picker; mantle clock.

Gent's Second Prize—Officer Al. Seagold, Fishman; Silver Shaving cup.

Gent's Third Prize—A. Leberpan, "Hard Times"; Glass Set.

HERMANN'S SOEHNE. The question is often asked why the members of the above lodge call themselves Sons of Hermann. The history of the man after whom the lodge takes its name is interesting in the extreme, which, briefly told, is as follows:

At the commencement of the Christian era, the Romans were considered the most powerful people in existence. They were advanced in civilization and made war on the weaker and more ignorant nations, thus keeping them in subjection. This was especially so with the Germans, who at that time were a semi-civilized people, and were kept constantly under the grinding foot of the haughty and insolent Romans, who compelled them to pay tribute to their emperors.

The Romans knew of the war-like nature of their German neighbors; also that they were a race with strong family love, and would die for the sake of their countrymen. But they were not skilled in warfare, and it was here the Romans had the advantage, and kept it by compelling, from time to time, the young German nobles to go to Rome, where they were held as hostages as a security of peace of the different tribes.

It so happened that "Hermann the Cherusker," a stalwart, brawny young German, was among the unfortunate members of the German tribes who were held as captives at Rome. He was of an obedient mind, and during his exile from his native land, he watched and studied. He wondered at first why so insignificant a nation as Rome should hold in subjection the powerful tribes of Germany, and when he saw how devoid of all honor and morals they were, his wonder grew into amazement.

But further study of their nature and institutions soon convinced Hermann that the Roman success had been but a trick of war; they were skilled; they were united. "In unity there is strength," thought Her-mann, and it was with this thought in view that he set to work for the freedom of his countrymen. By the time he returned home, he had gained considerable knowledge of the science of warfare, and no sooner was his foot on his native soil than he began forming a plan which was quickly put into execution. Going from tribe to tribe, from chieftain to chieftain, he enlisted their support and co-operation, and having arranged all the preliminaries, a tribe residing far north was ordered to rebel against their old enemy, the Romans.

The emperor of Rome hearing of the uprising among the tribes in the north of Germany, hastily summoned his trusted general, Varus, and sent him, with 100,000 picked men, to punish the Germans. He started on his mission through the dense forests, treacherous swamps; a country without roads, and finally after many hardships, the vast army reached as far north as the Pontoburger Wald. Here the Germans, who were in ambush, with their savage war cry, set upon the tired, half-exhausted and unsuspecting Varus and his army, and fought until Germans had over fought before.

Like demons, the long-suffering followers of Hermann battled with the Romans, the latter falling like wheat before the sickle. When General Varus saw there was no hope for his people, he ran his own sword through his breast, preferring death at his own hands rather than a worse fate that awaited him at the hands of the enemy, who in those days offered up as a sacrifice to their gods prisoners of war. The splendid army was swept from existence, only a few scattering hundreds reaching Rome to tell of the awful calamity that had befallen their army at the hands of the Germans. And thus were the Germans once more a free people, exemplifying that "in unity there is strength."

Fifty years ago the order of the Sons of Hermann was founded, and as no more appropriate name could be suggested, the descendants of Hermann the Cherusker, whose monument stands today to that memorable spot, where in the year 9 he led his people on to liberty, decided on the name by which the order is still known. May they always follow the example of their great ancestor, shake off all oppression, and unite with for their motto, "Freund-schaft, Liebe, und Treue."

WORTHY WOMEN'S WORDS. What Some Well-known Ladies Have to Say About Themselves and Their Sex.

MRS. HENRY WARD BEECHER.

MRS. GEORGE L. BRENSING.

Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher has endeavored herself to nearly every family in America. Not altogether because she was the wife of a brilliant divine, but because of her constant desire to aid people and help them along in life. Speaking about the relationship between mother and daughter, her words have been outspoken and sincere. Here is a portion of what she said: "There is no period in a mother's life that brings more anxious care than when she sees her daughters, who are blossoming into womanhood, beginning to attract the attention of young men, and it becomes evident to the mother, at least, that simple friendly relations are fast developing into something stronger and closer. A wise mother may not reveal her anxiety to her daughters, or tell them to what she sees this relationship tending, but influenced by the loving companionship and counsels which have constantly blessed them from earliest childhood, the daughters cannot fail to have gathered some ideas of the peculiar characteristics which should be plainly developed in a lover. Even in the first days of womanhood, a young girl cannot fail to understand that marriage with a man lacking certain qualities must be a miserable failure."

Mrs. George L. Brensing, 17 W. 15th Street, New York, whose picture appears above, says: "I am the mother of twelve children, and all are alive. I have never had a day's sickness in my life until about ten years ago, when I was seized suddenly with an attack of Bright's disease of the kidneys. Two doctors called it Bright's disease, and each said I must die. Indeed, I was actually in the throes of death. At that time a friend, a lady, came to see me, and said I was surely dying. Still she urged me to take a remedy which I had heard much about and knew but little of. I followed her suggestions, and I now solemnly declare and affirm that although I was dying when I took this medicine, it saved my life, and I believe that I owe my life entirely to Warner's Safe Cure. I also believe that it will save the life of any one who uses it for kidney troubles. I thank God for Warner's Safe Cure, and I have founded his praises far and near, and shall continue to do so." Words such as the above, drawn from human experience and suffering, become messages of hope to woman-kind. Young women, mothers, and those in advanced years are often called upon to suffer when it is unnecessary that they should do so. That they should employ every means of their power to avoid suffering, is unquestionably a solemn duty.

The ordinary cost of a cable road has been from $60,000 to $75,000 a mile of single track. It is estimated that on Washington this cost is brought down to $38,000 a mile.

RALLIAD OF LOST GIRLS. Chicago Record.

There are Gladys and Mae and Lenore and Kathryn (Kathryn, of late). But what under heaven's blue floor Has become of the names out of date?

These may be a Mattie or Mate— But these one regards with disdain— What has become of brave Katie? And where in the wide world is Jane?

At the tea parlour Melitas "pour" And finger the teapots and plates. You meet Melissands by the score; With Maries you go out to skate. In vain do you linger and wait. For a girl with a name short and plain. Where is Lily or Rose the sedate— And where in the wide world is Jane?

Yes! Smith! Oh, let me implore Will Guinevere Boggs be my mate? Or Thain, Maisie, or Honor— Some unpronounceable wife for a mate?

There are Elyse, Fanchon and Nanette, And Zoe and Fautime and Elayne— Have Cora and Nell quit the state? And where in the wide world is Jane?

Princess! In this tete-a-tete You'll likely refer to explain— But where the parson me deklins is Kate— And where in the wide world is Jane?

You make no mistake when you take DeWitt's Little Early Risers for biliousness, dyspepsia, or headache, because these little pills cure them. Chas Rogers.

Buffalo Courier: Since the fair sex took to wearing men's apparel the average brother and sister are bound together by a good many ties.

Take a dose of DeWitt's Little Early Risers just for the good they will do you. These little pills are good for indigestion. Good for headache, good for liver complaint, good for constipation. They are good. Chas. Rogers.

Nearly everyone will remember the barkentine Chehalis, which was here during the Centennial and used as the ship or honor. On the 23d of April, 1894, Captain J. Watts, master of the barkentine, threw overboard a "bottle paper." His position at that time was latitude 25 55 north, longitude 124 39 west. The paper was found January 19, 1895, on Westport beach, Chehalis county, Washington, in the very county in which the vessel was built. It had drifted almost due north hundreds of miles, with far less speed, but with almost as much accuracy, as a homing pigeon. The find was forwarded to Washington, and Captain Watts has just received the news from the Hydrographic office there, with the thanks of the office for his co-operation in the work of investigating ocean currents.

Messrs Bonner and Hammond, the contractors who are to build the Portland and Astoria railroad, says the Oregonian, will arrive in the city early next month, and it is stated that work on the line will then begin with a rush. They will also take hold of the Oregon Pacific, and reorganize that road. There have been rumors of late, principally emanating from Astoria, that the contractors have encountered some trouble in raising the necessary capital to begin operations. These reports are denied by parties in position to know the real situation. The latest letters from Messrs. Bonner and Hammond indicate that matters are progressive favorably, and that work on the road will surely commence in the near future.
