The readers of newspapers of ten or fifteen years ago cannot fail to remark the wonderful change that has lately come over Henry Waterson, editor of the leading newspaper of the South, the Courier-Journal. Time was when no fair-minded person could read Mr. Waterson's articles or hear his public utterances without losing all patience. Some of the meanest and most unjust things said about Northern men, and especially those prominent during the war period, came from Mr. Waterson. Yet this same Mr. Waterson was an honored guest at the last annual New England dinner in New York, and a few days ago, in Chicago, he delivered one of the most beautiful eulogies ever pronounced on the motives and character of Abraham Lincoln. A correspondent of one of the leading Eastern dailies, now traveling through the South, sends the following account of a talk had with Mr. Waterson in Louisville: Mr. Waterson does not hesitate to describe the break in the South as a permanent one. He speaks of it as a result which was destined to occur as soon as the Republican party met the Southern people, "with its policies in one hand and the olive branch in the other." As soon as the race question, which has hung over the South as a menace since the Reconstruction days, was removed, the Solid South was broken. It will remain broken unless a Republican congress by the revival of federal elections bills attempts to fuse it together again, and that is most unlikely. The Republican party, according to Mr. Waterson, has become more moderate and conservative on all public questions than it has been, and with the race question out of the way, Southern men will divide on party lines naturally and according to their interests and convictions. The defeat of the Force bill and the repeal of the Federal Election laws have brought other Republican policies to bear directly upon the South, where they are exerting attractive force. While the Republican party now seems to have the better chance of carrying the next presidential election, many things may intervene to change the situation. That election will unquestionably, turn upon financial questions rather than the tariff. That protection has been gaining ground in the South Mr. Waterson frankly admits. New recruits for that cause spring up from the introduction of manufactures and the diversification of industries. Cotton manufacturing, in his judgment, will be removed inevitably from New England to the cotton belt, where there are superior facilities for carrying it on economically. In like manner he anticipates the transfer of the iron industry from Pennsylvania to Tennessee and Alabama. With its inexhaustible supplies of cotton, coal, iron, and timber, the South has all the raw materials required for successful competition with the North in manufacturing. It is destined to become the manufacturing center of the country. These changes in the industrial order are inevitable, and will involve naturally a shifting of opinion on economic questions. Aided by the proverbial zeal of new converts, protection may yet find its strongest support where industries are newest—that is, in the South.

is a structure to be torn down & foundation to be blasted away, or a protecting wall to be reduced to chaos, Wilson is the man to send for. But when a constructor is needed, when a builder is required, Mr. Wilson has shown, by his own performances, that he is not on the list of eligibles. To his overshadowing genius as a destroyer the prostrate industries of a nation and an arid desert of Democratic despair pay eloquent tribute. Of his broad and comprehensive incapacity in constructive statesmanship the record of his vain efforts for an honorable solution of the bond question affords convincing and convicting testimony.

What congress will do in the way of financial legislation a year hence is not a question of practical concern to the country at the present time. The crowning consideration is that the country will have that body off its hands now for nearly a year. There is a marvelous recuperative force in the business interests of the United States, and they are likely to accomplish wonders between this time and the end of the year when emancipated from the peril of vicious legislative tinkering. A greater improvement in trade may reasonably be looked for than has taken place in the past twelve. It is probable that the present government loan is the last one that will have to be made. That element of possible disturbances has been removed. The treasury, owing to the increased revenues already coming to hand, or which are in sight, will probably be able to take care of itself in the future. Apparently the financial clouds have been dispersed, and a slow but continuous and certain recovery from the financial prostration will set in.

The recent severity of the weather may be judged from the fact that several Arctic birds never before seen in England, have been captured in the Cambridgeshire fens. Along the South Atlantic coast of this country the fish are reported to be benumbed with cold and, floating in the coast rivers in large schools, are caught by the boat load.

The Belmont bond syndicate, it is said, already have in sight $10,000,000 profit on the last government loan.

ITCHING AND SCALY

Dreadful Skin Disease 9 Years. Entire Body Covered. Doctors and Medicines Useless. Gave up as Hopeless. Cured by CUTICURA for $4.75.

I feel it is my duty to tell you my experience with CUTICURA REMOLVENT. I have been troubled for over nine years with a dreadful skin disease. When I first tried all the best remedies, I felt the same on my back, between my shoulders, a few days after the spots turned gray and began itching. I tried all the best remedies, but they always failed. Then I gave it all up, thinking there was no cure for me. I noticed your advertisement in the Tacoma Evening Star, and thought I would try the CUTICURA REMOLVENT. To my surprise, three boxes of CUTICURA, one each of CUTICURA SOAP, and three bottles of CUTICURA RESOLVENT cured me entirely. My skin is now as pure and white as that of a child.

Thoughts for Fishermen

On a dark, stormy night, when the tide is ebbing fast and the hardy fisherman finds it almost impossible to handle his net, has he ever stopped to think, should it become caught on a snag, what brand of twine would stand the greatest strain? Did he ever ask his brother fishermen what sort of twine they used? If so in nine cases out of ten, if they be successful fishermen, the answer has been "MARSHALL'S TWINE."
