The movement in favor of the purity of the ballot in the South is increasing.

All over this section the best people are expressing a determination that hereafter every voter, black or white, shall be allowed to vote his sentiments and have his vote counted.

This change has been brought about largely by the increased strength of the Populists, who are white men and, for the most part, former Democrats.

These men are determined not to be deprived of the honest fruits of their future victories by the dishonest methods heretofore practiced.

It is none too soon that popular attention in the South is being aroused to these conditions and that the bourgeois of that section are awakening to the fact that there is a demand for reform which they will be compelled to heed.

It was largely through the pressure of this growing public sentiment that the Georgia legislature was moved to take up the subject of election reform at the recent session and pass a new registration act, which it is believed will go far to prevent fraud in the future.

It also considered a ballot reform bill, which will be acted upon at the next session. A powerful impulse has undoubtedly been given to this movement in favor of election reform by the rapid growth of the Populist vote in Georgia, which in two years increased from 68,000 to 96,000.

A number of the Southern states have what they call ballot reform laws, but it is notorious that these laws do not prevent fraud and the practice of dishonest methods in elections, nor will they so long as their administration is practically in the hands of one party.

The absolute control of the registration by officials appointed by a political ring is one of the abuses in nearly every Southern state. It is very gratifying to find that throughout the South there is a recoil against the partisan methods and dishonest practices which for twenty years or longer have been a reproach to that section, and it is very earnestly to be hoped that this movement will grow in force and strength until it gives to every Southern state an election system under which every citizen can freely cast his ballot and have it honestly counted.

By raising the rate of interest which the government has to pay on its bonds congress will indirectly affect the credit of state, county, and municipal governments.

While the government is selling 3 3/4 per cent bonds financiers will not invest in state, county, municipal or railroad bonds at a lower rate of interest.

The federal government is a safer debtor than the minor governments or railroads. The aggregate of the interest-bearing debt of the United States, the state, county and municipal debts, the bonded railroad debt, and the mortgage debt of the people of the United States is in round numbers $12,000,000,000.

Portions of this debt are continually falling due and have to be renewed. Three-fourths of 1 per cent interest on this vast indebtedness would amount to $37,000,000, a sum which will annually be taken from the pockets of the American taxpayers if the incompetent Democracy is permitted to mismanage the finances of the nation.

The bankers who took the $62,000,000 of bonds expected, on entering into the contract, that an additional amount of bonds would be issued to them between the time of the adjournment of congress and the expiration of the contract in October, on the same terms granted them in this purchase.

It is said that, if Mr. Cleveland intends to carry out the contract in respect to other bond issues which may have to be made during the spring and summer, he will call congress together, and before issuing other bonds make the same proposition to the Fifty-fourth congress which he did to the Fifty-third, for 2 per cent gold bond. His recommendation failing of approval, as it is a foregone conclusion it will in the senate, even if it is accepted in the house, he will proceed upon the theory adopted in the present instance—that the responsibility for any injudicious bond sales he makes during the summer will still rest upon congress.

Probably there is no other class in the United States so deeply disappointed over the practical working of the new tariff as farmers.

They have been persuaded that because in most cases their product was not directly protected they received no benefit from a protective tariff.

But it now appears that in losing the market which the employment of men and women in manufactories created, they were subject to fully as large a percentage of loss as persons engaged directly in the protected industries.

Statistics have been collected showing that the value of farm animals declined in the last year to the extent of $341,000,000. The animals live, but are worth in the markets less than they were a year ago.

In the case of sheep the loss is final. There are 6,323,000 less sheep in the United States now than when the duties on wool were repealed.

Although the national treasury paid out in January $9,000,000 more than the revenue received, says the Philadelphia Press, Secretary Carlisle guesses that the surplus for the whole year 1895 of government receipts over expenditures, will be exactly $22,503,000.

The secretary of the treasury has been a bad guesser from the start. His estimates have never even approximated the actual result.

He jauntily talks of a surplus with a monthly deficit confronting him at the same time that Senator Gorman assures the senate that the condition of the treasury is critical and the deficiency $100,000,000.

Carlisle as a financier has been absurd from the beginning, but his reporting a surplus on the strength of his imagination solely would be amusing if the situation were not so grave.

During Harrison's administration of Republican "misrule" more than $250,000,000 of the national debt was paid. In less than two years of Democratic rule, the country's debt has been increased over $150,000,000.

But the Democrats claim that the increase is the result of Republican policy. Then what policy was the decrease of $150,000,000 the result of?

Thoughts for Fishermen

On a dark, stormy night, when the tide is ebbing fast and the hardy fisherman finds it almost impossible to handle his net, has he ever stopped to think, should it become caught on a snag, what brand of twine would stand the greatest strain?

Did he ever ask his brother fishermen what sort of twine they used? If so in nine cases out of ten, if they be successful fishermen, the answer has been "MARSHALL'S TWINE."

It is the ONLY Brand of Twine to use.
