Down in the burnt district last night the scene presented a picture of Astoria during the palmy days when salmon crawled over one another in their ef-forts to navigate the Columbia, and twenty dollar gold pieces were as plentiful as they are now scarce. Every saloon was crowded with a thoroughly cosmopolitan crowd, and "knock down and drag outs" occurred in several places. It was a good-natured crowd on the whole, and gave the police force but little trouble. Where the people came from is a mystery, and many strange faces were seen among the crowd. OREGON'S NEW SENATOR.

What a Leading Chicago Democratic Daily Has to Say of Him. (Chicago Herald.) The senator from Oregon, Mr. Mc-Bride, has been for many years an invalid. A few weeks ago he was in New York for special treatment and his niece, Mrs. Marshail Cushing, of this city, spent a month at his bed-side nursing him. Mr. McBride was at that time in very low spirits and when urged by his friends to return to Oregon and make a fight for the senatorship, replied that he was too near death's door to think of such a thing. "Besides," he added, "Senator Dolph is my friend. I will stand by him to the last." Mr. McBride's friends endeavor-ed to convince him that an election to the senate, opening out a new career for him, might save his life by having something to live for, but Mr. Mc-Bride would not take this optimistic view of the situation. At the last moment he comes to the front as a winner of the long contest with no treacher; Sheriif Hare yesterday received word that the "Linn County Case" for testing the legality of the present salary law, will come up before the suprementation of the suprementatio ing the legality of the present salary law, will come up before the supreme court during the March term.

While secretary of the state of Oregon he caused a room at the capl tol to be fitted up as a chamber and transacted the business of his office while lying in bed. Before his acci-dent he was a great lover of out-door sports, an enthusiastic horseman and a dead shot with a rifle. He has a passion for owning land and is rich. He is not married.

A year ago today Afbert Dunbar was cogitating in his own mind whether to go to Portland and look for a situa-tion or open up a store for himself in this city. He came to the conclusion that Astoria was on as good a road to prosperity as any other town in America, that there was as much money paid out here by the cannerymen every season to fishermen as there was gold roduced by all the mines in Oregon.
did not take him long to decide what his future course would be—and the building where he is now located was rented and soon after occupied with a small but first-class stock of dry goods and notions. Everything he binalled was of the best, and with his thorough knowledge of the business he stands today with a trade that would be a credit and joy to a much larger house than his. Still, he says this is but a beginning.
