Bimetallism is a misnomer from the standpoint of the silverites. It is a fraud used in working upon the prejudice of the uninformed. Everybody believes in the use of both gold and gilver as money. If that is bimetallism all right, but everybody does not believe, by a long shot, that the two metals are of equal value now, or that alone; everybody does not believe, by to have two yard sticks. One or the other of the money metals is bound to ing. be the scandard, in fact, (whatever the legislation may be) us long as one is worth more as uncoined metal than the other. Just as the buyer wants his calico measured by the yard stick that eneasures thirty-six inches to the yard and not twenty-four inches, with equal self-interest and self-protection will people demand that their dollars, in purchasing power, do not fall short of one hundred cents. Gold being the only metal thint meets the requirements of such a standard, the most ordinary common sense recommends its use as a standard. Can not any one see that values are relative, but in order that the government may fix them as money, it must have a starting point, and that sharting point will naturally be something the value of which is high, inherent and independent of the state itself? Shall gold be condemned because from natural causes it is more valuable than any other metal? Shall men be called dishonest if they know and acknowledge this fact and are governed in their acts by such knowledge? Will the farmer, and the greater volume of silver money has dropped to its natural level, carrying down with it all paper money
