In an interview with Contractor Pareill yesterday that gentleman stated that his language, in relation to the hiring of men on the ditch work, had been most wilfully misconstrued by certain parties, and that his statement was not open to the construction that he would employ only Republicans. He says that the only line he draws is that of citizenship—men must be either native Americans or have naturalization papers to show their loyality to the country adopted by them as a home. What a man's politics are, or what his nationsality or church affiliations are questions never asked by Parelli.
