THE PASSIVE GROCER.

Here is the American Grocer's excellent en picture of a tradesman that all of s know and come into daily contact is free from ambition and his nature un-tainted by an aggressive spirit: He gives no thought for the morrow, nor concern for yesterday, and is content with to-day. He is not a believer in enthusiasm; shows little emotion and is willing to let the store run itself. Just so long as liabilities are met without special ex-ertion he is satisfied. New ideas, progresalveness, keeping up with the times, style, system and a mastery over detills occasion no concern, nor is he moved when his easy-going, indifferent policy is brought into contrast with his goahead, contented competitor. He moves in ruts and is satisfied so long as his condition is not materially changed from what it was lifteen, twenty or more years ago. A few years since we tuet one of these passive fellows who kept his books in pound, shilling and pence, as was the custom in this coun-try forty years ago, simply because he was satisfied with that plan and didn't care whether the decimal system was bet-ter or not. Just so long as the passive grocer has his living he is satisfied to let matters take their course. He claims he is free from excitement, worry and His beat is between his home and his store, to which habit has chained him, so much so that a trip to New York or other city of supply is an event in his life. changes. Trade papers are never read because Trade papers are never fead because they tax his mental powers and are too suggestive. Advertising in any manner is foreign to his thought. He claims that consumers know best what they want and where to purchase; that for many years he had served them in his way, been lenient as to credit, and "that if they want to trade anywh re else, why let them go." He is very accomodating and is always quick to respond to the request of an old patron, but he never attempts to suggest a new but he never attempts to suggest a new but he never attempts to suggest a new line of goods, or to educate his trade to a new standard of quality. In short, he allows himself to be led instead of be-coming a leader. Long hours never worry him, for he is as happy in his store as his home and with his family as with his merchandise. Occasionally he is aroused from his passiveness by some heavy loss through over confidence in ex-tending credit or by reason of theft, fire

He is unfriendly to the Grocers' association, the board of trade or other or ganizations, claiming that it is as much as he can do to attend to his own bus iess without trying to regulate folks' affairs. It never enters his mind that he is a unit in society and is re-sponsible for the effectiveness of that unit. To entertain such a thought might paralyze him were he to be receptive to modern methods or new ideas.

Being passive, this sort of a grocer does little harm. He is never accused of cut-ting prices, making innovations, meddling with his neighbors, and therefore is left to pursue his inoffensive way peaceably until death takes him from the scene and his estate goes to the surrogate's court for settlement. THE TRADE OF SIAM. The London Times says: "The official report for 1893 states btat the num-ber of vessels which entered and cleared the port of Bangkok was 577, as compared with only 285 in 1892, while the increase in tonnage was 277,530 tona, or 132 per cent. The total value of the imports, as shown by the custom house re-turns at Bangkok, was $17,489,641-equivalent, at the average rate of exchange for the Mexican dollar, to £2,259,078. This was an increase of nearly £1, 000,000 over the previous year. The great increase of trade was the more remarkable owing to the temporary check caused by the Franco-Slamese difficulty in 1883. The exports' in 1893 amounted to 44,457,114, as compared with only £1, 286,580 in 1892. This large increase was due chiefly to the enormous output of rice, and it is satisfactory to note that the exports of rice from the three Indo-Chinese ports in 1863 were as follows: Bangkok, 775,701 tons, Rangoon, 1,063,900 toes, and Salgon, 664,-

STUPENDOUS JOBBERY.

In 1878, when the democrats of the house passed a free coinage bill intro-duced by Mr. Bland, the late James G. Blaine in several platform speeches characterized it as "the most supendous piece of jobbery that ever received the sanction of the national house." At that time the bullion in a standard dollar was worth 84 cents. When the buillon in a standard dollar is worth 63 cents the proposition to make it worth a dollar is a piece of jobbery more than double th size of that Mr. Blaine denounced.

THE EFFECT OF GOOD WORK.
