SPOILING BUTTER. Astricultural Entomest Dairy writers frequently caution agains placing butter where it will absorb the odors or flavors from decaying vegetables. The worst thing about this is the need of it. Butter will absorb odors, not only from stale vegetables, but from sound ones, and they impart to the butter a flavor that destroys or overpowers the true butter flavor. A case is in mind just now. The writer was supplying butter to the former owner of this firm and one day planned what was intended for a pleasant surprise, so, befor the ples with a delicious aroma were place in the package, separated from the by a cloth circle and a layer of salt. Th surprise was on the other side. Wor came back that the butter was fine i looks, grain and everything but flavor that was not agreeable. Now, some butter has an unpleasant flavor that never was near a rosy apple and there was a possibility that the cause should be sought elsewhere, but in dutime came a later report saying that the butter was excellent after the surface layer had been removed.

This suggests another point: Conumers should have a suitable place to sumers should have a suitable place to keep butter after they get it. If the sur-face is all the time exposed to the odors of vegetables and kitchen flavors un-classified, the best of butter will soon get off flavor, and the maker will be under suspicion of furnishing butter that will not keep. SOME LITTLE ECONOMIES.

The pretty shirt fronts of embroidered muslin and insertion, so dainty, yet so high-priced, have set many nimble fingers to work, as most young women prefer to make them for thomselves. To further this object many of the best shopkcepers sell now by the yard combinations of tucks, needlework, insertions, and tiny lace ruffles, which are from ten to twelve inches wide, and, when bordered on each side with plain muslin and finished with a band at the throat and drawing string at the waist line, complete the garment. To make an entire bodice two lengths of the band are required, one for front and one for the back, and little skill is required to adjust them to the figure by the aid of the plain sheer muslin which forms the rest of the bodice. Dotted white Swiss and plain white organdies are now being made up by fashlonable dressmakers for summer gowns over slips of colored silk. An economical mother with several well dressed daughters has had the slips made of colored silesta and entirely separate from the gowns—a slip and low bodice of yellow silesia, one of pale pink, and one of cool green are dave you anything for the Lean and the same of the Remember that it takes a host things to make an interesting exhibit, not delay reporting what you have to fectly well simulated in the silesia at one-third the cost.—Vogue.
