The silver fanatics will soon wake to the discovery, it is to be hoped, that this product also is controlled by similar in-fluences. If siver becomes relatively scarce, the production falling below the world's actual demand, the price will rise just as the price of wheat or of cotton rises. Or if it comes to be generally be-lieved that the supply of suver will fall short of the world's demand, an advance in price may be expected, and will result from the same natural causes which controi the prices of other commodities. But it will be difficult this year, in the light PROFUSION OF FLOWERS of current events, to convince men of any intelligence that the prices of com-modifies are in any sense controlled by the world's demand for silver, or the world's use of silver as money.

WHEELING INTO LINE.

The prediction has often been made that before the next presidential campaign opens the republican party would be solid for sound money from one end of the country to the other, outside the silver mining camps; that it needed only party astray to write the principles of common business sense and honesty upon change of public sentiment is already going on in those states. It is significent openly repudiated the free silver folly. North Pacific Brewery sentiment, the dominant sentiment of the republicans of that state, is on the side of the dollar that is as good as every
