THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

The question of the representation of the Southern states in the next national Republican convention is likely to become of interest. It will be remembered that the national convention of 1892, at Minneapolis, adopted a resolution recommending the national committee to so alter the basis of representation that the states which give Republican majorities shall have a corresponding representation in the convention; that is, that the states which must be relied upon to elect a Republican president shall have something to say about the nomination of the candidate.

This resolution was adopted because of the fact that President Harrison could not have been nominated at Minneapolis had it not been for the support of the delegates from the Southern states, not one of whom gave him an electoral vote. In that convention there were 906 votes; necessary to a choice, 455. Harrison received the following votes from Southern Democratic states: Alabama, 15; Arkansas, 15; Florida, 8; Georgia, 26; Kentucky, 22; Louisiana, 8; Maryland, 14; Mississippi, 13 1-2; Missouri, 28; North Carolina, 17 2-3; South Carolina, 13; Tennessee, 17; Texas, 22; Virginia, 9; and West Virginia, 12; total, 240 1-6. Harrison's majority over all, was 166.

The national committee will not meet until next February, but the matter is beginning to receive attention because Senator Elkins, of West Virginia, who is a candidate for the nomination for vice-president, proposes to fight the proposition for a change. He calls himself a "Southern man," and is going to run his campaign on that basis. Hence he does not want the power of the Southern states in the convention abridged or curtailed. Whether he will succeed in his purpose to prevent a change remains to be seen.

The silver question bids fair to split the Democratic party wide open. The announcement of Chairman Harrity that no meeting of the Democratic national committee will be called this summer to consider the silver question or the holding of a silver convention has already inaugurated a movement in behalf of a "volunteer" convention, and the men who engineered the Illinois gathering are at work preparing for a national meeting. Secretary Hinrichsen, of the Illinois committee, is in communication with silver men and officers of the state committees in the West and South generally, and is urging them to take concerted action in the matter. The friends of President Cleveland at Washington shake their heads despondently, and say frankly that they do not see how the tidal wave is to be checked or how the party can stand any show of success next year if the agitation keeps up. A few of the more sanguine hope that improved business conditions may turn the attention of the public to other matters, but the silver leaders evidently do not intend that the silver question shall take any place in the background. There is every reason to believe that a national gathering of Democrats will be called to consider this question, and that it will be attended by delegates from probably three-fourths of the states, perhaps from all. Meantime, the Republicans are making the most of it. They are pushing for advantage in the close states. They believe that they will stand a show in Kentucky if the silver issue keeps to the front as it has done to this time. This is the explanation of the earnestness in the recent convention of the party in that state.

The free silverite leaders count on the ignorance of their followers to keep the latter from seeing the cheat it is proposed to pass off on them and the rest of the people, which would benefit them no more than the adding of water to milk would increase the quality of the latter. They ask their deluded hearers to believe that two half-worth dollars would be better than one full-worth dollar; that with four coins worth 75 cents each they could buy more than with three coins each having a buying power of 100 cents; and if the purchasing power of the dollar could be reduced to 20 cents of the present power it would be better to have five of those new dollars than one dollar that has 100 cents worth of buying power. That is their argument, and it is all there is to the movement outside of a concealed desire to make a few persons rich at the expense of the rest. They do not show or pretend to show that they want to increase the intrinsic value of the silver dollar back to the old standard, for that would not subserve their real purpose. If it were sought to cement them to the rule of equal value with which was unquestioned for some eighty years, they would cease to take an interest in it. They would step aside and go hunting for another issue, saying there was nothing in it worth talking about or agitating for. Can it be possible that the masses are so densely ignorant as to be unable to detect the specious sophistry that has been so clearly opposed by intelligent men of both parties? Are the people so blind that large numbers of them will continue to be deluded by the supposition that the wages of the toilers would be improved and their condition made better by paying them with a larger number of coins, the buying power of each of which coins was correspondingly decreased. Surely they have sense enough to understand when the case is properly presented to them, that the value of their milk would not be increased by adding to it an equal quantity of water, or their condition improved by paying them with twenty half-dollars instead of ten full-worth dollars, and that this is the best result offered to them by the advocates of silver monometallism. This being the whole of their possible gain, while it is certain they could not get even that until after they had passed through years of terrible commercial depression and industrial paralysis, why should they want to upset existing conditions, destroying half the purchasing power of two-thirds of the money in the United States and driving out the rest? Surely they ought to have discernment enough to perceive that the pleading of such a catastrophe as a supposed means of producing greater abundance of cheap money in the long future can only be made by a lot of played out politicians of both parties, who have been repudiated by their constituents, or a set of arrant rogues who wish to wax fat on the miseries of the people.

There is a clergyman in Philadelphia so popular that his congregation has outgrown even the large church where he preaches, and he has consequently adopted the device of connecting three halls by telephone, so that three congregations can hear him at once. This is another illustration of the fact which some of the ministerial brethren do not seem to recognize—that people will go to church when they get good preaching.

The Astorian is glad to note the signs of prosperity shown by our neighbor, the Pacific Journal, of Ilwaco, Wash. Not content, merely, with giving its readers two papers a week, instead of one, as formerly, it has now enlarged its size to a 7-column folio. The Journal is a bright, newsy and clean paper, and is well worthy of the appreciation and support it is evidently receiving from the good people of Ilwaco.

During the eleven months ended with May our exports decreased about $74,000,000, and by a significant coincidence, our imports increased in that time about the same amount. The average citizen can readily see that the the effect of the new tariff law is favorable to more buying than selling, or, in other words, to the advantage of foreign countries at the expense of the United States.

It now begins to look as if the free silver issue will be worn out before the next campaign by the premature activity of the friends of the white metal, thus leaving the country free to consider other and more important questions.

Prosperity kills financial quackery. Greenbackism got its deathblow when the factories started up in 1879, and silverism is getting knocked out by the demand for workers and the advances in wages.

The Democrats have rarely been known to say as many mean things about the Republicans as they are now saying about one another.

The advances in wages are to be regarded as forerunners of an inevitable Republican victory in 1896.

THE SOUTH—ITS NEEDS, ITS FUTURE

American Economist.

The discussion in congress on the first tariff act—that of 1789—clearly shows that the framers of that act, some of whom sat in the convention which drafted the Constitution, regarded no interest of greater importance than that of agriculture. The south is especially interested in that feature of protection, because her sugar, rice, tobacco and cotton, her four great staples, stand in greater peril today than at any epoch in our history, and all because the cordon of foreign cheap labor and competition is being drawn around these products closer and closer.

Old prejudices should give way to concrete facts. The south, with a new generation of men, looking anxiously and hopefully forward to better days, when there shall be more capital and consequently more business and less "politics" there, is entitled to all the light on the subject of protection that it can get.

The scars incident to the war between the states have healed, the last vestige of reconstruction—exemplified in the Federal election or so-called Force bill—has passed away, the feeling engendered between those who were active participants in the greatest struggle the world ever saw are being cemented into ties of fraternal friendship, and new business relationships are rapidly forming, based on the confidence which capital requires and slowly imbibes. A new blood and a new life agitates the south, which sees an example in the north of what the protective policy can do as against foreign rivals and for those who have too long resisted the march of progress and prosperity.

But one thing remains for the south to do. It must unhorse free trade and enter the fight for the regeneration of that section under the old whig banner and the great principle of protection for home industries—protection for agriculture, for the raw materials grown on our own soil which enter into our manufactured products. That sentiment once dominated the south, and, while slavery drove it into seclusion in 1849 and 1850 and almost out of mind, history has preserved the record of the fact. No section of the country has a more glorious climate, none more important agricultural products—including cotton, rice, sugar and tobacco—none is richer in lumber and wood, in mineral resources, water power and energy than the south.

In adapting itself to new conditions, in seeking to attain the full measure of benefit to be derived from production, the old theories must be cast aside and practical views must be accepted. The south cannot hope for success by shaping its legislation or by sending men to congress to clog and hamper the march of her productive development and industrial progress with a political theory that is sure to poison the patient, paralyze its energies and seriously retard its prosperity. A "tariff for revenue only" takes no account whatever of our business relations as they may be injuriously affected by foreign rivals who seek to control our home market. The future of southern agriculture, commerce and manufacturing industry depends upon that other policy which can most readily be explained in these words: Stand up for America! Protection for home industries against the world.

A DESERT SAND STORM.

How Two Distinguished Americans Passed a Night on the Sahara.

The following is taken from a recent letter written by Mr. Whitelaw Reid describing the thrilling experience of himself and Mrs. Reid in a sand storm on the Sahara:

"The first gust swept the tent from its fastenings and spread the suffocating canvas over the sleepers. Then it was swept away into the night, leaving them all at the mercy of the blinding, choking cloud of sand. The minute particles cut into their flesh, got into their eyes and mouths and buried them in its drifts. It flowed down their backs, filled their shoes and every fold in their clothes. The force of the blast blew the particles even through the chinks in their trunks and when the bags and boxes were opened later they were found to be full of sand. The almost imperceptible particles were driven between the leaves of the books in these bags and boxes. The storm lasted seven hours.

"At the outbreak of the storm the camel drivers, who had seen such things before, piled the camel saddles about Mr. and Mrs. Reid, and covered their heads with blankets. Then they built up a bulwark of trunks and lay prostrate while the suffocating blasts continued. The seven hours of the storm were hours of agony. Every one in the party was almost suffocated by the sand, and when it was over they arose as if from the dead. The faces of all were cut and sore from the flying sand."

HOW THEY NAMED THE BABY.

They talked or Medora, Aurora and Flora,
Of Mabel and Marcia and Mildred and May;
Debated the question of Helen, Honora, Clarissa, Camilla, and Phyllis and Fay.

They thought of Marcella, Estella and Bella;
Considered Cecelia, Jeanette and Pauline,
Alicia, Adela, Anette, Anabella,
Add Ethel and Eunice, Hortense and Irene.

One liked Theodora, another Leonora;
Some argued for Edith, and some for Elaine,
For Madeline, Adeline, Lily and Lora;
And then, after all, they decided on June.

A BIRD SONG.

A little bonnie bird I know,
With breast more soft than eider down,
A dress she wears of dapple brown,
And sings with sweeter tone, I trow—
Ah, sweeter far this birdie sings
Than all the birds that summer brings;
And yet her song is only this:
"I love you, papa!"—then a kiss.

Not tenderest song of nightingale,
Nor sparkling trills and gurgling gush
Of joy from velvet-throated thrush,
Nor brilliant pipe of mottled quail,
Nor tuneful plaint of whippoorwill,
The measure of her song can fill;
And yet her song is only this:
"I love you papa!"—then a kiss.

—EX.

In years agone when he had not
The five-and-twenty cents,
He watched the daily ball game through
A knothole in the fence.
He sits in the grandstand now
And marvels much to know
Why he sees not half of what he saw
Through the knothole long ago.

Absolutely Dry and Pure Tropical Climate

Pronounced by Physicians the most Favorable in America for Sufferers from . . .

Lung Diseases and Rheumatism

Many Remarkable Cures

The objections urged against Indio in the past by the large numbers who otherwise would have been glad to take advantage of its beneficial climate, has been a lack of suitable accommodation. The Southern Pacific Company, takes pleasure in announcing that several have just been erected at Indio station, that will be rented to applicants at reasonable rates. They are furnished with modern conveniences, supplied with pure artesian water, and so situated as to gove occupants all the advantages to be derived from a more or less protracted residence in this delightful climate.

Commodious and Comfortable Cottages

(From the San Francisco Argonaut.)

"In the heart of the great desert of the Colorado—which the Southern Pacific road traverses—there is an oasis called Indio, which, in our opinion, is the sanitarium of the earth. We believe, from personal investigation, that for certain invalids, there is no spot on this planet so favorable."

G. T. Stewart, M. D., writes: "The purity of the air, and the eternal sunshine, fill one with wonder and delight. * * * Nature has accomplished so much that there remains but little for man to do. As to its possibilities as a health resort, —here is the most perfect sunshine, with a temperature always pleasant, a perfectly dry soil for rain is an unknown factor; pure oxygen, dense atmosphere and pure water. What more can be desired? It is the place, above all others, for lung troubles, and a paradise for rheumatics. Considering the number of sufferers who have been cured, I have no hesitancy in recommending this genial oasis as the haven of the afflicted."
