In all their "whereases" and resolution the free silver extremists carefully ig nore all reference to the labor standard. When wheat declined because of an oversupply they immediately charged it to "gold," but have had nothing to say about the advance in wheat this spring nor of the important fact that other farm products average higher this year on the farm than they did about the time that "terrible crime" was committed in 1873. They charge to the "appreciation of gold" the cutting down of the cost of trans portation from the farm to the consumer one-half since 1973, made possible by the building of better tracks, larger cars, and engines that save enormously in fuel per ton of produce carried. They make no allusion to the well-known fact that the unit of human labor now produces far more iron, cloth, and other manufactured material than in 1873, and that while that unit of labor is better compensated the cheapening in cost inures to the benefit of the consumers, among whom are the working producers themselves. In offering their quack panaces of "free coinage at 16 to 1," the silver you not? I do not profess to be able to words first and ill have but one form for give you off-hand an entire treatise on both adjective and adverb; there being no ple who listen to them the fact that their remedy is a debasing of the unit

Yesterday's Oregonian contains a long and interesting article on the dairy interests of Clatsop county, contributed by Mr. H. B. Luse, the state dairy and food commissioner. The article is a summary of that gentleman's recent official investigations in this locality, and is a surprising showing, both as to the extent of the dairy business and the wonderful adaptation of our soil and climate for butter and cheese making. Mr. Luce gives the names and location of the prominent dairymen in the vicinity of Amtoria, and pays a high compliment to enterprise in introducing the latest me-chanical and scientific applances in the art of butter making. From a reading the purity of their product and their of Mr. Luce's article one would think of the two at their ratio in the market. Thus, if gold is worth twenty times an that Astoria is fortunately situated in respect to her supply of first-class home-made butter, and that from the quantity of a given face value weighs twenty of a given face value weighs twenty mane butter, and that from the quantity of the pure ant wholesome article pro-duced within a radius of fiver or six miles from the city, no one living here need look sisswhere-either on account of price or quality. -for all that could be reuson-ably consumed of that huscious comesti-bie. It may axionish Mr. Luce, and his Oregonian readers, to know that more than one-half the butter handled by As-taria's enterprising merchants is brought here by sources from San Francisco, and that it is sold for a higher price than people of the most fastidioas taste pay for the superior Clatsop courty product in the Portland markets. The farmers of Claisop county are indebite to Mr. Luce, in the botter is indebite to Mr. Luce, sources ever published, and we supect to see the property owners of As-toria's resources ever published, and we supect to see the property owners of As-toria's called upon re long to contribute manney for its printing and distribution in pumphlet form, that being the favorition in pumphlet form, that beting the favorition in pumphlet form, that bein of the pure and wholesome article pro-In pamphlet form, that being the favorite Astorian method of building up and encouraging all home industries.

than to dispel them. Consider the greenseretal values of the bullion contain-the gold and silver coins. There their original issue. The law authorizing them was a war measure and deemed wis no other thought in the minds of our grandfathers than that of making the dollar in gold intrinsically equal in value to the dollar of sliver. But this fact the free sliver extremists mullelly, willfully and fraudulently omit to take cognizance of. What they are demanding is not the ratio of value, of actual pur-chasing power, of gold to sliver, at the time they refer back to, but a ratio of weight in which the purchasing power is so completely knored that it would rate sliver at twice the value attuched to it is comparison with gold by the com-mon consent of merchants and financiers stances are much better adapted to the purpose than others. The money com-modify should possess the following properties; indestructibility, divisibility, uniformity of quality, malleab.Hty, and also general diffusion in nature so that also general diffusion in nuture so that no particular community shall have a monopoly in its production. No other substances possess so many of these properties and in such high degree as the so-called preclous metals, gold and giver. They have become money by a process of mitural selection through the operations of commerce. A government can-not make money any more than it can make corn. It has performed its full functions in regard to money when it designates the substance to be used as money and provides a ready method for determining quantity and quality." "What do you understand by the term bimetallism?" "Bimetallism means the use of two charged by the same value which was contemplated when they were entered into. A monometallic standard, either gold or silver, is undoubtedly better than
