TIN-PLATE AND QUININE.

"We have been favored with a newspaper clipping which shows a marvelous growth of the American tin-plate manufacture, and the writer who sends it to us says that it is only a short time since we were ridiculing and belittling every attempt to establish tin industry in this country."

The foregoing from the New York Evening Post is characteristic, but it does not state all the facts. We do not believe it is true that the objection to the tariff on tin plate is on the ground stated. We do not believe that the Post objected to the tax on 65,000,000 people just that half a dozen persons might carry on the business in this country."

The general improvement in business, as soon as a beaten Democratic course ceased to have power to do evil, is one of the most instructive events of this era. Its meaning will not be overlooked by the Republican journals and speakers, all may be sure, nor will the voters be slow to apprehend it. Indeed, it comes in such a shape as to impress not merely the more intelligent, who are able to trace the effect of Democratic defeat in reviving confidence, but the more ignorant class, who may only see the Democratic victory in 1892 brought 50 per cent lower wages and Republican victory in 1894 brought 10 per cent higher wages. What the connection between the facts is fully understood or not, members their experience, and as a burned child dreads the fire, they will have a wholesome fear of votes for Democratic free trade. The greater the improvement in business may prove, the more impressive will be the contrast, and the stronger will be popular confidence in that party whose defeats are calamities and whose victories are blessings to the people.

Knicker legislation which caused half the money of the world to be thrown away. The way to understand the right on all most every question is to get the opinion of the New York Evening Post, and then take the opposite view.

We have another illustration of the Portland "good will" toward Astoria in the article in yesterday's Oregonian charging the river pilots with the crime of running ships aground in order to discourage them from going to Portland. It is strange that a reputable paper like the Oregonian would permit such an unjust and groundless charge against so worthy a body of men as these pilots to be published in its columns. The condition of the river channel between here and Portland is known to mariners the world over, and if the Astorian were disposed to retaliate on Portland for the shameful slur referred to, it might do so effectively by relating a few facts in connection with the trip of the new China steamer down the river a few days ago. The Oregonian will surely apologize for the wrong done the pilots in the article in question, which Astoria people are charitable enough to believe crept into its columns inadvertently.

It is only through the zeal and patriotism of Judge Gray, Mr. F. D. Winton and a few others, that Astoria, the oldest town on the Pacific coast, escapes the shame of an utter failure to observe in some befitting manner the anniversary of the greatest day in American history, and one of the important epochs in the world's history. For the sake of the example to the young and rising generation, every man and woman in Astoria who loves our country and the flag that represents us ought to make it a special point to be present at the humble celebration in the Methodist church this evening.

Judge McBride's able opinion on the Columbia river jurisdiction question ought to settle all doubt on the subject. The law of the case is laid down in such a sound and convincing manner that it is difficult to see how there is room for any further contention. Whether Judge McBride's view is concurred in by the Washington authorities or not, it will remain as the Oregon construction and position on the question, and is certain to be sustained by the United States courts if they are ever called upon to pass on the matter.

Mr. J. H. Higgins has pleased his friends by accepting the call made upon him to become a candidate for school director, and his election will be hailed by the people of Astoria generally as a worthy succession to the place so long and satisfactorily filled by the late Mr. Dickinson.

THE OUTLOOK.

New York Tribune. President Depew is a close observer, and his tidings from the west and southwest indicate a steady change in public opinion. The western remark, contrasting the passionate intensity of feeling on the silver question in southern states with the comparative indifference elsewhere, possibly creates a mistaken impression. There is no excitement now in commercial and financial circles, because it is thoroughly understood that the existing situation cannot be disturbed by new legislation favoring silver coinage until after the next presidential election. In the financial and commercial world, the Democratic faction wants to get the upper hand within the party, and both fancy that Republicans can be drawn into the contest and weakened thereby.

Practical men know that there is not the least occasion to desire more money in circulation than there is already, for so much of it is lying idle now, and gravitating to monetary centers in such employment at rates as low as 1 1/2 per cent per annum, that the accumulation is actually embarrassing. The general advance in prices, ranging from 10 to 25 per cent in many important products, has occurred without any influence one way or the other from the silver market. The price of bullion has scarcely changed for two months or more, while cotton, wheat, hides and other products have made their sensational rise. It is nobody's business to disturb the existing monetary situation except the theorists, whose fanaticism or ignorance blinds them to every experience. If this strange craze is passing away at the rate of a month, as Mr. Depew and others believe, it may happen that there will not be left enough of the money question to fight about when the presidential election comes. One of the struggles of the Democratic faction for the mastery carry them into open antagonism to each other. The primary intention of those who stirred up the excitement was to divert public thought from the effects of the tariff agitation. This was so clearly perceived by the Republicans of the league that they adopted strong resolutions on the tariff question alone until it was found that the organic law of the body had attempted to make platforms for the party. But the feeling in the convention was now the less clearly manifested. That body was practically unanimous in desiring an uncompromising fight against Democratic free-trade theories and Democratic blundering and inconsistency in tariff making. The work of the last Democratic congress, the industrial consequence of Democratic success in 1892 and of Republican success in 1894, was beyond question the bringing of voters as the main issue in the campaign of 1896, no matter who may be the candidate.

The general improvement in business, as soon as a beaten Democratic course ceased to have power to do evil, is one of the most instructive events of this era. Its meaning will not be overlooked by the Republican journals and speakers, all may be sure, nor will the voters be slow to apprehend it. Indeed, it comes in such a shape as to impress not merely the more intelligent, who are able to trace the effect of Democratic defeat in reviving confidence, but the more ignorant class, who may only see the Democratic victory in 1892 brought 50 per cent lower wages and Republican victory in 1894 brought 10 per cent higher wages. What the connection between the facts is fully understood or not, members their experience, and as a burned child dreads the fire, they will have a wholesome fear of votes for Democratic free trade. The greater the improvement in business may prove, the more impressive will be the contrast, and the stronger will be popular confidence in that party whose defeats are calamities and whose victories are blessings to the people. here are some facts based on experience and history and the extreme silverites' answer to them: 1. There is not a free coinage country in the world today that is not on a silver basis.

"The silver extremists' answer to this is 'Shylock's Shylock'." 2. There is not a silver standard country in the world today that uses any gold with its silver, while on the other hand every gold standard country in the world uses silver with its gold.

"The only attempted answer to this is 'Money sharks'." 3. There is not a silver standard country in the world that has more than one-third the money circulation of the United States.

"To answer this the extreme silverites shriek 'Gold bugs!'." 4. There is not a silver standard country in the world where the laboring man receives fair pay for his day's work.

"What answer do we hear to this fact? Merely this: 'Shylock's Shylock!'." Wherefore we are constrained to believe that the third party doctrine of unlimited silver at 16 to 1 is not at all a strong or sound one, and that Democrats had better keep clear of it.
