MR. HARVEY'S LOGIC.

The intelligent people of the whole country are laughing over an argument advanced by Mr. Harvey in his debate with Mr. Borr. He argued that there should be a double money standard because nature is organized on the duplex principle. Man has two hands, two eyes, two ears and two legs, says Mr. Harvey, and he should therefore have two money metals.

This reminds us of the argument that was advanced a couple of centuries ago why there should not be more than seven planets. The human head has seven orifices—two ears, two eyes, two nostrils and one mouth—therefore there could not, in the nature of things be more than seven planets. It was added also that seven was a sacred number, because there are seven days in the week, and this was taken to add force to the former argument.

Of course Mr. Harvey was driven into a corner, and used this way of getting himself out. It is a poor compliment he thereby paid to the intelligence of the American people, however, if he supposed that any man with sense enough to cast a vote would be influenced by such an absurdity.

Furthermore, nothing is more certain than that Mr. Harvey's plan, which he mislabeled "bimetallism," is not that at all, is silver monometallism pure and simple.

A certain sort of Democrats—"Administration Democrats," they style themselves—are vying with one another in the violence and opprobriousness of the epithets they invent and apply to the devoted followers of the free silver idea in the south. For example, Sam Jones says, "they are not only ignorant, but prejudiced as well, and ignorance and prejudice, which go hand in hand, is the curse of the world."

He also says they are going down the precipice of obscurity, "pushing their leaders and promoters with them." But, he says, "they stand some show, however, of reaching heaven, as God has made special provision for fools and children." After a long course of other abuse and ridicule of the same sort, this pious and cultured gentleman winds up with the remarkable, from him, proposition that "God's sun never shone upon such a country as America today; a kind Providence never furnished such a saviour for the poor man as the south."

Mr. Jones is right, to be sure, but it is the very opposite of what he and his ilk have always taught and preached, and such a declaration is the foundation of all Republican faith and doctrine. Like the "Grand Secretary" Carlisle, like Hancock, and other Democrats, too numerous to mention, Mr. Jones' mindlight in his old age is proving better than his foresight. Only a few years ago when the Republicans were battling with the ignorance, gullibility and prejudice of the very class these latter-day sages and statesmen are now reproving and abusing, every one of these worthies was doing all he could to inflame the minds, excite prejudice, and stir up discord and discontent among the people of the whole country. Grover Cleveland, as his speeches and earlier messages to congress will show, was the first calamity howler the country has had since the war, and his election to the office he now holds is due directly to the discontent and prejudice he succeeded with the help of these same followers and henchmen in stirring up among a tappy and prosperous people.

Everybody will concede that the paragraph we copy below from an article on the bond syndicate, published in the August Forum, is both logical and probable: "Closing the mines to the free exchange of silver in the Old World and in the United States lessened the demand and undoubtedly affected the price of silver; but the great decline in price is owing to the cheapening process dependent upon improved machinery, improved methods of production, improved facilities for transportation and exchange. By means of cable and credit the transmission of money from one part of the world to another is almost instantaneous. Silver has ceased to serve the convenience of men. It does not meet the wants of the public, of business men, or of bankers."

The leading trade paper of England, The London Economist, recently referred to a few of the benefits to British manufacturers resulting from our present tariff. It stated that owing to the restoration of cotton ties to the free list the recent advances in the price of iron in America have enabled English makers to capture orders for these goods. The same paper's statement in prices, the Economist said, raises the question of the future of the tin plate trade, a subject which it remarked is carefully watched by the South Wales Manufacturers, who are anxious to regain their old time monopoly. It admits that the decreased shipments of tin plates have been felt with crushing effect by the Welsh industry, but sees in the higher price for steel a possibility that the manufacture of tin plate in the United States may receive a check and the English trade be revived. Here is indisputable testimony to the value of the Republican tariff policy in building up the American tin plate industry and also to the worth of the Democratic tariff to British manufacturers of cotton ties. It is such testimony that straightens the cause of protection.

The police department of Astoria is an anomaly. In most other cities of the country it is the common patrolmen and roundsmen who are called before the board of commissioners for warning and disciplining. Here in Astoria, it seems, from rumors which are going about, the other end of the force requires the attention and admonition of the commission. It is hoped these gentlemen have the courage and ability to do duty necessary to the proper purification of this important branch of the city government, and that an example may soon be made which will operate both as a warning and encouragement to the more worthy and faithful, if subordinate members of the force.

The following suggestive paragraph is commended to the immediate and thoughtful consideration of the Honorable Board of Water Commissioners of the city of Astoria:

"London, July 2.—The meagre supply of water in the eastern part of London is causing increased suffering to the inhabitants of that section. The streets are filled with women offering threepence or more for a bucket of water, but are unable to get it for the very good reason that there is none. The death rate in East London has been doubled since the companies began turning off the flow of water, except for about two hours in the twenty-four."

The Boston Journal says: Democrats who feel it their duty to defend the present tariff are between two fires. If they praise it, they are praising what Cleveland called an act of "perfidy and dishonor," and a deficit-making tariff, which would be ten times worse for the Republican duties it preserves. Yet they must praise it to try to make the Republicans think the tariff should not be made the issue at the next campaign.

STATE NEWS.

Interesting Items Cited from Oregon's Leading Newspapers.

The Oregon Fruit and Produce Company received telegraphic advices yesterday, says the Statesman, that its carload of peach plums, shipped by them from Salem on Thursday of last week had arrived at Chicago in excellent shape and had been forwarded to New York where the plums will be sold to the fruit-eating people of that metropolis. The company will not send any more plums but expect to make several shipments of Bartlett pears. New Yorkers spend many millions of dollars annually on fruit which they purchase on the street, and the profits made by the vendors, allowing even for waste in such perishable goods, is enormous. These peach plums at a box, containing from five to six hundred plums. They sell the plums on the stand at a penny each or at the cheapest at five for three cents.

The La Grande Gazette, in its last issue, says: "A few boys in this city were led to believe that there was a five dollar gold piece on each eye of the chinaman that was buried last Monday and they, under the impression that money would be dug up, they did not find the money, and probably becoming scared at what they had done they left without covering up the remains. The only thing done in the way of punishment of the young ghosts, we understand, was that their parents were required to 'fill up the grave.'"

The total shipment of peaches via the S. P. from Astoria up to last night, says the Astorian, amounted to nearly 10,000 boxes. Of this amount only a few hundred boxes went southward, all the remainder going to Willamette and Sound points. These shipments were of the early varieties—mostly Alexanders. Heavy shipments will commence with the ripening of the latter variety. As far as average prices are concerned so far have averaged fairly well.

Articles have been filed incorporating the Oregon Lumber Mining Company, to develop mines of gold, silver and other precious metals, particularly the Bonanza of Josephine county; office, Grant's Pass; capital, $50,000; president, J. H. Brown, secretary, Edward Wade, Robert Brown, John King and Samuel Baldwin.

Engineer Joseph and Freeman Watson, on engine No. 148, struck a big rock on a sharp curve near Umatilla Tuesday. The rock had rolled squarely in the center of the track, and it broke the plates and cracked in the axle pan, but for a wonder, did not cause the engine to tip over or even leave the rails.

The Dallas Times-Messenger is informed that a very fatal disease prevails among horses in the neighborhood of Wagonville, and several valuable animals have been killed. J. W. Rogers, a pioneer of 1845, died at his home at McMinnville, July 25. He was an Indian war veteran of the Northwest and was one of the most prominent and respected pioneers of the past in this country. He was born in Indiana April 13, 1821.

The following gentlemen, on Saturday, filed the necessary bond and papers in the secretary of state's office and were duly commissioned notaries public: F. D. Hennessey, of Portland, and C. W. Fulton, of Astoria.

DESTROYED A BUST OF BISMARCK.

A little boy has been brought up before a Berlin magistrate charged with having played with and destroyed the plaster cast of a bust of Prince Bismarck. Damages were claimed to the extent of 1,000 marks. It seems the bust had been forgotten during removal from one studio to another, and discovered, with some companions, had been accustomed to play with fragments from this atelier, and when it was closed got in through a window, took out what they believed to be an old useless bust, set it up in a neighboring garden, and played "Aunt Sally" with it. The magistrate, as the child was too young to be responsible, decided that his mother should swear that she was convinced he did not intend to do any harm, that she did not believe in taking one to take the bust out of the workshop, nor to prevail on his companions to destroy it. If the mother will not take this oath she will have to pay 750 marks, and the bust has been valued.—London Daily News.

ADELAIDE AND ETON ROY.

A contemporary of "Good Queen Adelaide" tells me the following forgotten story: The queen had invited a few Eton boys to lunch with her. Eton boys, as we know, frequently improve the shining hour at a pastry cook's shop in Windsor High street and are thoroughly well conversant with a special family, with the prices of the different delicacies. Sweets were served in due course at the royal table. The queen noticed that one boy refused the first tart handed to him. "Which would you prefer," she asked. His glance turned to another dish. "The fourpennies, your majesty," he replied, eagerly. I believe it is true that our own dear Queen Victoria when a little girl was asked to spend the day with the Dowager Queen Adelaide, and when told she might have chocolate as a treat on the occasion begged earnestly to be allowed "to clean the windows," and that the treat was immediately granted her.—The Woman at Home.
