HE IS AN IMPOSTOR

Such Seems to Be the Record of "Bishop" Ropert. RECOGNIZED BY MR. KEEGAN. Past Exploits Brought to Light in the Interest of Order and Decency.

Considerable excitement was manifested throughout the city Sunday and yesterday over the arrest of the man Ropert, who arrived here Sunday morning purporting to be a Roman Catholic bishop, in charge of affairs at Honolulu. It seems that he is the same party who made the same professions at Portland, Friday and Saturday, full accounts of which appear in Sunday's and yesterday's Oregonian.

In Astoria he made himself first known to Father Egan, then peddled his wares; "He came to me about 5 o'clock Sunday morning. I was engaged in church and very busy at the time. The boy came to me and said a bishop here to see you, and when I went to him, found him standing in the Bishop's robes and when he had said to me he said that he was a bishop, I asked him if he had any letters from the archbishop. He replied that he had not as he was very much pressed for time, and the archbishop had told him to just go along and would be all right. He wanted to say the eight o'clock mass and preach a sermon and take a collection in aid of the suffering lepers. Being so pressed for time, I let him to wait for the ten o'clock mass, as there would be more people and more good could be done. I did this to gain time and to get from Portland. I did not receive a prompt reply and he preached the ten o'clock mass, in which several statements which he made I do not at all recall. He was a fraud, he said he had 100 priests under him, while there are not twenty there altogether. A collection was taken up and about 100 handed to him.

In the afternoon Ropert was visiting with the sisters at the hospital when a message was delivered for me. He seized it, claiming it as his, opened it, saw the contents and made immediate preparations for departure, telling the sisters that they had called him to that point. Believing something was wrong, I called at the telephone office myself and was handed a duplicate of the message delivered at the hospital, and took steps at once for the apprehension of the impostor. The message which I sent to Portland is as follows: "Ropert, Bishop of Honolulu, (now here) all right. Answer. L. DIELMAN. N. Diekmann. No. 15 a fraud, if you can, have him arrested. B. ORTH. Father Diekmann says he would have lent the man money had he wanted it, but now he is interested in exposing the fraud committed in the name of the bishop, and to prevent imposition upon others.

Mr. Thomas E. P. Keegan, formerly of Little Falls, Wash., now of Astoria, yesterday morning called on the recorder and recognized Ropert, both by the features and voice, as a man who went by the name of Shields at Little Falls, during the winter of 1905-1906. Ropert, it is stated, had been traveling on the coast, purporting to be a priest, and had victimized a number of people, claiming to be a missionary. His frauds were discovered and he was arrested at the instance of Father Hayes of Tacoma, but for some reason was not taken to the city of Tacoma, but was waylaid playing the same game under different names, until he arrived at Little Falls. Mr. Keegan was on the coast at the time of his arrival, but upon his return was told that there was a priest in town, who was sent by the priest at Coville, Prairie. Now Mr. Keegan is a church and school teacher at Little Falls, always entertained visiting clergymen and provided rooms for them to sleep in. This man was introduced to Mr. Keegan who had had his make-up was not quite as it should be, and having heard of the escapades of the impostor, he was on the look-out, and he was cautious. Shields, as was his name at that time, made an effort to interest Mr. Keegan in the building of a church and school at Little Falls and securing his influence in obtaining the necessary land and funds from the citizens there and in the neighboring villages. Mr. Keegan was told that with his plans, believing that the man was not true and also not thinking it would be proper to have a church and school built at Little Falls, which was part of the plan of Shields. Shields also claimed that his order had headquarters at a small village east of Vancouver, Wash., on the Columbia. This Mr. Keegan knew to be false, as he was born and raised at Vancouver, and was well acquainted with the entire locality. Shields secured the necessary dollars from citizens of Little Falls and then left for other parts. A few days later Mr. Keegan heard of the man being at the steamer home in East Portland and having left there in a sudden manner. The circumstances above so impressed the mind upon Mr. Keegan's mind that while he had not seen the man since he had seen the man since he had seen the man in Little Falls, he is positive that he is the same man.

The charge against Ropert for obtaining money under false pretenses was dismissed and a new charge of appropriation of the same money belonging to another was entered against him. In the meantime habeas corpus proceedings were commenced by Attorneys Long and Le Force to release the man on the grounds of insufficiency of commitment papers. Attorney Clyde Fulton for the state filed a demurrer and the case was argued in the county court. The demurrer was sustained and at 10 o'clock this morning before Justice Abercrombie, the criminal case will be taken up.

BURNED HIS CLOTHES. While fighting brush fires an Astorian loses his wardrobe. Captain Egan Barker and several friends spent Sunday on the Waldau, as the captain's country home. They were engaged in fighting a brush fire, and were so busy that they forgot to take their clothes with them. The trouble is all laid to Mr. Barker, who started a small brush fire, which soon got to such proportions and in such close proximity to the Waldau that all manner had to turn in and work for their life. After several hours of fire-fighting they succeeded in saving the barn. One of the party whose name is withheld for certain reasons, returned to town minus his coat and vest. He laid the wearing apparel on the ground and while he was assisting in beating the fire back he forgot to take them. When he returned nothing but a few ashes remained of the coat and vest. He says the captain is responsible for the loss. The young man had not yet decided to bring suit against Mr. Barker for the value of the destroyed property.

A redemption certificate was ordered issued by the clerk to J. Q. A. Bowley for a tax sale for the year 1906, on the payment of the tax costs and 20 per cent penalty and interest, from June 20, 1905, to date of payment, at 8 per cent, being the rate of property assessed to said Bowley for the year 1905. It has a seating capacity of 700 and the stage apparatus will be modern and complete. The professor is to use the house for first class plays only and the hall will know ability to cater to the public wants in that line is a guarantee that Astoria will be well served in the long of amusements. There has been a long felt need of a good amusement house, and that the professor is keeping abreast of the times in every particular. No doubts exist that the house will receive support and all of his many friends wish Prof. Boggs good luck.

PHILIP CARROLL WAS ARRESTED Sunday afternoon on a complaint sworn to by John Dixon, charging him with an assault with a deadly weapon. The trouble is the result of family difficulties. Arriving there he met antagonists to the house where his wife stopped and compelled her to go and his case continued until this afternoon.

A FISH THIEF.

A Hazy Night Saves Officer Seaford From Capturing Him. For several weeks past Officer Seaford has been watching the actions of a certain individual whom he had reason to believe was engaged in the business of stealing fish. The officer was not able to locate the man until last evening about 12 o'clock, when he walked down to the Kinney cannery wharf and had been there but a short time, when from under the cannery came a boat loaded with fish. There was but one man in the skiff, and he started to pull up the river. The officer ran up to the old Telephone slip, back of Ross, Higgins & Co's store, and when the boat came along it was some 30 or 40 yards from the dock. Officer Seaford called out to him to come in. He replied that he would and started to pull towards the wharf, but realizing that it meant arrest, turned the boat around and started to pull up the river in a northeast direction. Seaford fired three shots at him, but they did not take effect. The officer then ran to the O. R. & N. wharf, where he was joined by Officer Thompson. They lowered one of the dredger Lads' boats and started to overtake the sailing boat. The night was hazy and a distance of forty feet ahead of them could not be seen. After searching around for some time they returned without their man.
