THE MONOGRAM.

Rescued From the Sands and Towed to the City.

The yacht Monogram which captained Monday afternoon in front of the city, leaving three out of its sixteen crew members, was brought from Des Moines Sands, to which place it drifted, last evening. The steamer Occident made an attempt to bring the yacht to the city last night, but the heavy weight of the boat in the submerged craft and the lightness of the steamer's engine made it impossible to budge her. Yesterday afternoon the steamer Wagona, for the sands with Mr. Leathers and several others, succeeded in turning the yacht over, thus freeing her from the heavy sacks of sand which held her down and allowing the ill-fated craft to float. The Monogram was thus towed to town and anchored at the foot of the wharf. Several coats and vests and one rubber boot were found in the bottom of the boat, as were also a number of valuable tools which Mr. Leathers considers himself fortunate in not losing. The report that the boat was one of the men had been found entangled in the rigging is untrue. None of the bodies of the unfortunate yachtsmen who were lost will be recovered until the river gives up its dead or the bodies are picked up floating in the bay or washed upon the sands. The Monogram is not injured to any great extent and will be immediately placed in condition for entry in the sloop race tomorrow. An effort will be made to tow her away for a trial run this afternoon and if possible sail her in the race today.

ENGINEERS AT WORK.

And Contractors Will Commence at Once.

Engineers Curtis and Jamieson, of the Astoria and Columbia river railroad, are rapidly shaping matters for the operation of the contractors.

The large body of engineers are some twelve miles out on the line from Tongue Point, and a smaller corps at or near Tongue Point are engaged in locating the line and grade stakes. Another contingent of engineers are at work on the west side of the bay. A small gang of graders will be put to work at once on the line from the city east. This means that work will commence as soon as the men can be got here. Astorians will be glad to see the dirt fly and will have the assurance that the road is to be thoroughly built in every particular and that it will be capable of handling all the traffic that may be expected. It is the terms of several trunk lines, it is necessary that the road bed should be solid, the grades light and the curves easy. These are features about which too much care cannot be taken and concerning which Mr. Hammond is determined that no mistakes shall be made.

Work will progress fast enough when the foundations are well laid.

The question of the location of the station has not yet been decided, as other matters have entered into its consideration which have delayed the decision. It is thought that after the regatta business matters can again take their course.

A TWISTER.

A twister in twisting
May twist him a twist,
For in twisting a twist
Three twists make a twist;
But if one of the twists
Untwists from the twist,
The twist untwisting
Untwists the twist.
That is, when it's twisted with any other twist than MARSHALL'S.

A BRILLIANT AFFAIR.

Was That Given at Fisher's Hall Last Evening.

Within that commodious and well-built pavilion familiarly known as "Fisher's Hall" have been given many pleasant affairs and happy social events, but probably none have been more successful and enjoyable than the one given by Court Astoria, A. O. F., last evening. Every detail that would tend to make the affair the most satisfactory ever given in Astoria had been intelligently considered by the management, with the result that their efforts were most completely successful in every particular. The hall was very tastefully decorated with bunting, flags, Japanese lanterns and flowers, all arranged with striking and pleasing effect. One of the features that added much to the success of the affair was the instrumental concert given by that popular body of musicians known as Parson's orchestra. The concert preceded the dance and was warmly applauded. An exceptionally well arranged dancing program was then carried out and continued until the " wee wee" hours. Considering the many counter attractions going on last evening, the success that attended this affair speaks most highly for the ability and intelligence displayed by those who had the entertainment in charge.

Don't forget the only place of amusement in the city is at the Casino, the greatest show ever given in the city. Admission 25 cents.

REGATTA BALL.

An Immense Crowd Gathers in Gymnasium Hall.

No better indication of the popularity of the regatta could have been asked for than the brilliant throng which assembled last night at Gymnasium Hall to trip the light fantastic at the Annual Regatta Ball. The costumes of the ladies were rich and beautiful, while most of the gentlemen in full dress added to the picturesqueness of the scene. The rooms were handsomely decorated with dark green tulle, and handsome flowers which made a foil for the delicate dresses of the ladies and altogether the affair was one to be remembered.

At an early hour the crush began until it soon became apparent that the rooms would be uncomfortably crowded. Notwithstanding this fact every one was to the best of humor and having a most enjoyable time. The program contained 15 dances, of every variety, and was carried through to the finish, and then they wanted more.

The 14th Infantry Band furnished the most delightful music, which made one dance whether or no and all voted the affair a grand success and well worthy the efforts of the hard working committees.

TO CULTIVATE THE MEMORY.

A habit of forgetfulness is one of the greatest hindrances in all business and social relations, but our modern style of life and education is certainly injurious to the memory. The old method of learning by rote has fallen into disfavor, and there was much to say against it as a hindrance to originality; but there is a time in every child's life when learning by rote is a useful thing, and it is at a very early age, for the minds of young children not being occupied with so many things as those of their elders, they are in a receptive condition and their memory is more retentive than later on. Every mother has been struck by her child of two or three years remembering perhaps for some months where a certain thing was placed, or some little event, and it is a matter of common experience that we remember the events of our early youth more forcibly than those of even a few months back.

It is possible to begin to cultivate the memory as soon as the child can talk, when it should be made to describe everything it has seen during its morning walk, or to repeat some little story that has been told to it, or a short lesson which has been learned. Every teacher beginning a new lesson should be sure that the lesson of the day before has been retained and understood, for the more we overwork the little brain in the attempt to force knowledge upon it the less we impress upon it for future use. It is the experience of all those who have examined for examinations that as soon as the examination is over the undigested knowledge passes away, similarly through life. Unless an item of knowledge is assimilated it becomes as useless to the mental system as an undigested article of food to the bodily system, and in both cases they act as an irritant, interfering with the proper digestion of other matters.

In a well ordered mind facts remain, and points are, as it were, pigeon holed in such a way that they can be brought out immediately when required. They are untidy brains in which the objects of knowledge are confused and not ready to hand, so that they may turn up at unexpected moments, but not just when wanted, in the same manner as there are untidy drawers, wardrobes, and rooms, and to cultivate a habit of mental order as well as one of physical order should be the earnest desire of every mother and teacher.—Home Notes.

"The Boston Traveler" says that a few weeks ago a Maine young man bought a pair of socks containing a note saying the writer was an employee of the Kenosha (Wis.) knitting works and wanted a good husband. She gave her name and requested the buyer, if an unmarried man, to write with a view to matrimony. The young man who found the note considered the matter in all its phases and decided to write to the girl. He did. Awaiting the answer with considerable anxiety he was at last rewarded with a curt letter stating that the girl was now the mother of two children and had been married four years, and the letter he had answered had been written over so long ago. It was a "sock" dollager and the young man hunted for a solution. He found it. The merchant of whom he bought the socks doesn't advertise.
