THE CHANGE FOR THE BETTER.

The American Economist says it is amusing to observe the readiness with which the free trade papers ascribe the present partial prosperity to the Gorman tariff.

These same journals denounced that measure when it passed, declared Senators Gorman and Brice to be traitors and upheld President Cleveland in condemning the bill and in his refusal to sign it.

The claims made for the Gorman tariff are delusive. It was preceded by a period of business depression that followed quickly the free trade success in 1892, which the free trade press proclaimed justly as a decisive victory for their policy.

The success created by the old methods adopted in framing the Wilson bill, and by the long debate which followed, increasing the prevailing depression. Then came the tardy amendment of the bill in the senate, and all the bickering which the course of the Democratic majority produced.

People felt some relief when the bill became a law, in August, 1894, because they knew the worst, but there was no change for the better in business. Gloom still hung over the country. Factories remained idle. Labor was unemployed. Stocks and bonds, which are such good indicators of the state of trade and industry, did not enhance in value. No did produce rise in price. The European demand was dull. The general outlook was discouraging in the extreme.

The Gorman tariff went into effect, for the most part, in September, but the depression continued. It was not until the great popular uprising at the elections of November, 1894, that confidence began to return. When the full measure of that victory was understood, the country shook off the torpor which had restrained its energies. People felt that the Populist craze had received a fatal blow; that tariff tinkering in the interest of free trade was checked effectually; and that our finances would soon be in safe hands. Nothing further was heard of the threats to amend the tariff still more in the interest of "free raw materials," at the short session of 1894-5.

The improved conditions resulting from all this enabled the Belmont-Morgan syndicate to purchase the $20,000,000 bond issue with the fullest confidence. The conviction became strong that the Republican victory of 1894 presaged decisive success in 1896. Despite the poisonous influence of the Gorman tariff, manufacturers began to take courage. Merchants commenced to renew their depleted stocks. Railroad earnings increased and the stock exchange soon felt the influence of reviving prosperity. Many factories were run again on full time. The busy hum of toil was heard once more at the iron furnaces and rolling mills of the North and South. The gloom in great measure had passed away. The prospect of abundant crops with better prices for produce did the rest.

All these matters are recent and are known to careful observers. It is well, however, to recall them, so that the public may not be misled by the audacious assertions that we brazenly re-echo in party platforms during the coming fall.

Senator Dolph is noted for his plain and straightforward utterances on political questions. He was never known to evade an issue or seek to leave himself any loophole of escape from the consequences of his statements or actions. In this respect he is a splendid contrast to many of our most prominent politicians and statesmen. It is safe to say that his reputation and consistent policy have contributed as much as anything else in his career to raise up staunch friends and sincere admiration for him, not only in his own state, but throughout the country. He makes many strong statements and bold predictions in the interview published this morning, but a large majority of the Republicans of Oregon will agree with him in every word he utters. Those who are hoping to see the next convention make some kind of compromise or trade with the cheap money advocates will especially do well to remember and take warning by the ex-senator's emphatic declaration that no man can advocate the free coinage of silver by the United States alone and stand on the new national Republican platform.

The war department is considering the matter of making Governor's Island, near New York, headquarters for a regiment of regular infantry, thus placing United States troops close to the big cities of New York and Brooklyn in case of riots and other disturbances. This is carrying out the policy of concentrating the troops near the cities, as the Indian wars are over.

It is positively denied that Turkey has decided to accept the Armenian reform demands of the European powers. Turkey's past experience with the nations of Georgia have led to a window of discretion. Complete rearrangement of the map of Eastern Europe and Western Asia would seem to be the ultimate outcome to the Porte's blind policy.

Thousands of weavers in and about Fall River, Mass., the center of the cotton manufacturing industry of America, have voted practically unanimously not to strike at present for higher wages. The manufacturers have recently voluntarily increased wages all along the line and they will do so again as soon as business shall justify it.

The city of Cleveland is arranging a celebration of the 100th anniversary of the settlement of the "western Reserve." That was an important event in the nation's history. The good old New England faith and spirit still live at the time have left their stamp on the state, and not on Ohio alone.

Oregon manufacturers will be a prominent feature of the Exposition at Portland. The leading manufacturers of the state will have exhibits in which the processes of manufacture will be carried on. The fair will be a bee-hive of industry, making the most interesting exhibition ever given in Portland.

The current year is said to be Kentucky's banner year for apple-jack, which is another way of saying that the backwoods feuds will be as lively as ever before.

The Queen of Portugal is studying medicine. It is fortunate for her people that she is not an Empress, else she might insist on practicing upon them.

Senator Peffer has bought a newspaper in Kansas. We had always supposed that his speeches were printed in the Congressional Record.

The harmony that the Democrats had at Syracuse seems to have been of the kind that does not harmonize.

After that New York convention Democratic presidential aspirants will be scarcer than ever.

SENATOR BRICE AND THE FARMER. The Republican, Watson, Ohio.

Senator Brice is understood to be a candidate for reelection if the Democracy elect the legislature. His reckless action in voting against the retention of even a low duty on wool shows that he has no regard for the farmer's interest.

Mr. Sherman then asked for 40 per cent protection and appealed to the Democratic members to give the farmers the benefit of that, as the Wacker tariff of 1886, the pride and boast of their party, allowed that duty on wool. His appeal was unheeded. Mr. Brice opposing. The bill was considered in committee. Mr. Brice tried to represent, had in 1891, 4,750,000 sheep, valued at $13,500,000, being more than double the value of those sold. Upon the free coinage of silver, land was opposed to protecting wool, still Mr. Brice could have secured a duty on that article. He was of the Gorman combine and one who represented a great wool growing state. As the Gorman-Brice combine changed the Wilson bill by securing protection on articles which were not in the free list, it is a fair inference that wool could have been protected also if Mr. Brice had so desired. No Jackson-Randall, Democrat or friend of American industries can consistently vote for a member of the general assembly who favors Mr. Brice as senator.

THE ENCOURAGING ASPECT OF THE SILVER QUESTION. Ex-Secretary of the Treasury Charles S. Schreyer in the October Forum.

The present situation of the silver question in the United States is such as should encourage those who are known as "sound money" men as distinguished from the advocates of the free coinage of silver by this government at the ratio of sixteen ounces of silver to one of gold. Upon looking over the whole field of silver, it is apparent that there are more advocates of the free silver policy than there were a year ago; but those who are opposed to that policy are far more outspoken now than then; and that men who seek the favor of the public in many of the regions where free silver has been strong are finding courage to take the other side, that indicates the direction the popular straws, which they see, are beginning to be blown. A still better sign is the greater intelligence of men in these regions where men have been in favor of sound money rather by association and instinct than because they were convinced of its truth through processes of reasoning. Where there was one man able and ready to give reasons for this faith there are now ten. The three onslaught that the free coinage interests made in the latter part of 1894 and in the early part of 1895 undoubtedly contributed to the better condition that we now present, for it stirred men's minds and evoked much original research and thought upon the currency question, and this notably in the region most affected by the silver question.

Even that dangerous publication, "The Financial School," has contributed largely to the evident fact that the desires it was intended to advance have received; for it contributed more than many—if not all other—things to the excitement of thought and activity of mind that have resulted in the simultaneous publications in reply to it. Of course this improvement in the condition of the public mind has been prompted by rising prices and by returning courage in the business world; investors at home and abroad again have confidence in our securities which grows as confidence in our money grows. Silks by side and step by step the two go on together. Let the latter, however, but halt once more, and the former will turn backward and desert us more completely than before. It is easy to exaggerate, however, the comparative influence of better times in changing sentiment; it is more true, as well as more agreeable and complimentary to the intelligence of our American people, to attribute this mainly to investigation, study and awakened thought.

REST. Mathilde Blind, reprinted in Little's Living Age.

We are so tired, my heart and I. Of all things here beneath the sky One only thing would please us best— Endless, unfathomable rest.

We are so tired; we ask no more Than just to slip out by life's door; And leave behind the noisy rout And everlasting turn about.

Once it seemed well to run on too With her importunate, fevered crew, And smother amid the frantic strife Some morsel from the board of life.

But we are tired. At life's crude hands We ask no gift she understands; But kneel to him she has to crave The abolition of the grave.

EFFECT OF CHICAGO'S CLIMATE. "How much can you let me have on this gold watch?" asked the young man. "Nothing, mein friend," replied the pawnbroker. "I had knelt out mefenceless, splendidly, isn't it? Good afternoon."

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITERS. Who infest the market and are the means of robbing sick people of their money, and what is still greater consequence, and not unfrequently aggravating the complaints under their labor. It is an act of duty we owe to society to warn the public against these dangerous frauds.

A 400 PER CENT IMPORT BOUNTY. If the Cleveland debt of $30,000,000 was created in the interest of reducing the tariff, or, in other words, causing larger exports of foreign goods, it is well to look at what has been accomplished in the proposed direction.

We think that this is a fair statement of the purpose of the Cleveland debt. The debt was created to reduce the tariff on imports, of which the debt is an adjunct, being intended to increase exports. Since the round up at the end of the Cleveland administration, the debt had been accomplished by a balance of some $30,000,000, there hasn't been a penny from Cleveland quarters about the American products, and there has not been a denser silence concerning the markets of the moon.

If, therefore, we conceive the Cleveland debt as created solely to increase imports, and thereby benefit, which is granted only for the sake of argument, American consumers at the expense of American producers, we find that the country is paying a bounty of pretty nearly 40 per cent of the import.

For the debt is, as we have said, $30,000,000. The increase in imports for 1894 over 1893 is $7,963,552. The petty of an export bounty is abhorrent to the free trader. At the same time the free trader is not averse to a bounty on the import of a commodity, and is lauding a policy which imposes an import bounty, and a 400 per cent import bounty at that. The sort of an economic policy that is being pursued in Cleveland is a most sufficient man strength and ignorance given—can get a party into is amazing—New York Press.
