The question of dealing with the inerensing use of alcoholic liquors is one which is fast obtaining overstratowing impostance in Europe; yet the statesmunstrip of the Old World finds Maxt powersees to hundle it. Within the last to years alcoholism has made extraordinary alternoon in France, till today the French working class are said to spend $2,0,000,000 a year on spirits. In England the conmption is said to equal $600,000,000, so that the pre-eminence in drunkenness stat rests in the United Kingdom. Before 1835 toblitual intoxication was hardly known in France, and it is the capitity the question of how to sheek the evn so pressing. In Italy a similar increase of the spirk drinking habit has been noted, and one proceeding, apparently, on somewhat similar lines. The original clause of this secons to have been the invention of new and cheaper methods of chiziming alcoholic fiquers from grain, thus condecting home so low in cost us to be within the react of the poorest.
