ON THE DEFENSIVE.

According to the tariff reform ideas of the administration, must be free of duty the imposition of a duty on that article would be the destruction of the only article which had not been taxed by the tariff. Everybody was in the best of spirits and all succeeded in having a good time.

To the administration mind, ale, beer, lager beer, porter, and other similar fermented liquors offer the best opportunity for securing revenue. The tax of a dollar a barrel on such malt liquors, the government secured $1,923,741.15 in revenue in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, and $2,814,111.15 in the fiscal year 1895. By increasing the tax on these fermented liquors, of which beer is by far the most important, the government could secure revenue without the additional expense for their collection. Influenced by this increase of revenue, without increased cost, Secretary Cassell will recommend that the tax on beer be increased from one to two dollars a barrel. It can be seen that this exactly doubles the present tax, and that a barrel, from thirty-five to thirty-two millions of revenue could yearly be obtained.

It is the administration's policy to tax the people more than thirty million dollars a year more, annually, by doubling the tax on beer, which foreigners could be compelled to provide the required revenue, by placing a duty on wool and upon liquors, which the new tariff bill now carries lightly. A duty on wool would not be paid by the wool-grower, and at the same time it would be borne solely by the brewer. That is, the present administration proposes to deprive the wool-grower of the price of his wool, and to give the brewer a million dollars annually, when this money could be better obtained by taxing foreign commodities imported into this country, and at the same time afford protection to American industries, that so sorely need it. In other words, not satisfied with attacking the manufacturing industries of this country through the new tariff bill, the Democratic party proposes to make an assault upon another industry, and that the brewing one.

It is not true, however, that the brewers would be compelled to pay the additional tax entirely. To be sure, they would be compelled to bear part of the increased taxation, but they would undoubtedly increase prices to their customers, and thus add to the expense of the drinker in fermented liquors. To partially recompense themselves for the increased cost of fermented liquors, saloonkeepers, and others, would sell them at a lower price than the cost of them by the glass or the bottle, to pay for part of the additional cost. This would be done by selling beer at a price which would include the cost of changing a little more for bottled beer. Thus the added taxation upon malt liquors would ultimately be largely borne by the consumer, and not by the brewer, as is maintained; and it must not be forgotten that there would be less beer sold of domestic manufacture, because foreign beer would be cheaper.

Aside from a formal discussion of routine matters that had accumulated in the cabinet and his cabinet, during the summer, the cabinet's time was taken up with the Venezuelan-British boundary dispute. This has reached a critical juncture by reason of the determination of the British government to arm the British Guiana frontier. As there is no much bitterness between the two countries, the British aggressive action may lead to a clash between the two. That would be an unfortunate event, as it would be an immediate cause for the withdrawal of the British troops from the border. The Democrats have been announcing that Mr. Cleveland would maintain an aggressive attitude in the matter, and that England did not intend to occupy the Venezuelan of her territory. This simulated intention to force the Monroe doctrine has done very little for the Democrats, but it has done much to show the administration that they are not to be trifled with. They will have to show their hands and either do nothing at all, as it did when the British occupied Corinto, or take a strong position and become directly involved in the controversy. There will probably be no clash between England and Venezuela in the November elections. In the meantime, the administration and Democrats throughout the country will be busy with the election. They will be on their side, proclaiming it to be their purpose to stand by the Monroe doctrine, no matter what the complications may be. They will be on their side, proclaiming it to be their purpose to stand by the Monroe doctrine, no matter what the complications may be.

STATE NEWS. Interesting Items Culled From Oregon's Leading Newspapers. Joseph Vey, one of the sheep kings of Umatilla county, can neither read nor write, but has business ability. He has amassed a fortune, owns four miles of better creek, and has paid $50,000 for a stage land.

George H. Dugan, of Portland, master in chancery, was in this city yesterday, says a Salem paper, for the purpose of offering for sale a section of the Oregon Pacific railroad, which City and County of Clatsop had obtained against some corporations who built the road. The sale was not made yesterday, however, but was adjourned to November 15th.

The Salem Post says: The following districts were commissioned from the secretary of the state, and the director to sign return of the authority of Oregon as notaries public, to-wit: Charles E. Wolf, editor of the Midland Monitor, Wellington, B. Howell, Astoria; J. F. Wealth, J. G. Wells, Tillamook county; H. T. Shaden, Oregon City; J. H. Haun, Lewiston, Wallowa county.

"Coyotes will eat watermelons," says the Ocean Oregonian, "a fact of which but few persons are aware. Recently the man on the Bailey Ditch Company's farm near Duane, Oregon, reported to the water-gate keeper that the coyotes no longer bowl things down around that ranch. The night before the center of a melon coyotes will bite off the end of a melon, leaving only the rind. By putting poison inside the melon, the night grower can see his way into the melon and death. Coyotes have been killed on the Panning ranch below Duane, and if they persist in tugging off these newly imported birds, local hunters will organize a hunt and kill every coyote that can be found."

The Portland Globe Works filed articles of incorporation in the office of the secretary of state today. The capital stock of the company is $10,000, divided into shares of $10 each; principal place of business in Astoria, Oregon, by order of J. G. Backus, John Renken and Sophia Backus. The object of this corporation is to engage in the manufacture and sale of all kinds of kindred articles. The Lead Gold Mining Company also filed articles of incorporation today with a capital stock of $40,000, divided into shares of $10 each; the object of the company is to engage in gold and silver mining; the principal place of business in Bull, Jackson county, and the incorporators are C. J. Hall, J. W. Odgers and A. M. Berlin, Post.

Grant county, says the Statesman, has seven new representatives in the state legislature. They were brought to Sun Bay, Oregon, by the Oregonian, J. D. Gibbs and Gust. They are Lloyd Miller and Fred Gunn, each of these years for a term of one year. J. H. Miller and Charles Kimball, each two years for a similar term; John Scott, two years, term of a dwelling; William Cutting, one year, term of a dwelling.

Scott's number says the improvements on the North Yumbill road will avoid several of the most grades, save some distance, and make a difference of at least an hour in the time of the stage crossing the mountain. Seven men are at work on the cut and Mr. Boatman expects to get the changes completed this fall. The great trouble with the North Yumbill route was that it followed over the highest points, making the grades so steep that the stage could not go over something awful, and the road had to be made in a way that would make some of the grades that followed around the hillsides. Those who located the road put it over the tops of the highest mountains, but because the ground was more clear, it will not do when we want daily mails from Portland. The hard efforts of G. W. Boatman to get the road made will be noticed favorably by next summer's travelers.—Headlight.

Attorney General Ideman was in the city yesterday and gave his opinion to the secretary of state relative to two of the questions which were referred to him in a recent issue of the Statesman. In the matter of the constitutional amendments adopted by the last two legislatures, Mr. Ideman thinks the failure of the last session to provide by special enactment for their publication and submission does not interfere with their proper publication now and submission to the people. He says the secretary has a perfect right to go ahead and publish the amendments using for that purpose the state funds appropriated for printing, and that the amendments can be voted upon with the same validity as though the legislature had taken these clerical steps. Relative to the matter of issuing warrants for the amount of land payments as soon as quietum deeds are made to the state, Attorney General Ideman is of opinion that Mr. Kincaid has no alternative; that he must issue the warrants upon presentation of the deeds, but he must issue them upon the funds in his hands, which are simply mandatory and must be obeyed. Secretary Kincaid returned from Eugene yesterday but was not seen by a reporter of this paper after those conditions were stated to him. He will likely follow them, however.—Statesman.
