It is now known that four sailors of the Italian bark Brom Carlo, which was recently sunk in a collision with the Brithand-made, white labor ish ship Condor off Cape Horn, were saved. Three of the men made their way up the coast to Guayaquil, Ecuador, and came aboard of the United States steamer Alert, undergoing repairs in that port, she having been run down by a British steamer, also named Condor. According to their story the awful disaster occurred during a dark, stormy night, and the two vessels came together with a crash be
