"The Pacific coast delegation in congress, whatever the views of its individual members in other matters of national importance may be, should go to Washington City this winter united and prepared for aggressive work in behalf of the Nicaragua canal. However widedivergent their ideas may be on the tariff or currency questions, they can all act in accord on the canal matter, and from the start they should make a strong. concerted effort in support of the bid which will no doubt be introduced early for it. No stone should be left unturned to see that work is actually commenced before another twelve months' time has come and gone."

This is correct, and such sentiments should be the unanimous expression of every paper on the Coast on this sub-The time is ripe for effective ef-The question has been agitated quite generally all over the country since the last congress adjourned, and public interest in the project is reviving everywhere. The report of the commission of engineers sent to investigate the route has been suggested, and that the outlay will be somewhat larger than was originally contemplated, but the work will be pronounced feasible, and, it is thought, will be strongly indersed as a practicable scheme uniting the two oceans and immensely benefiting the commerce of the world.

It has been recently reported that the president rathers favors the latter, but in view of his expressions on the subject in the past, this is unquestionably incorrect. The predominant sentiment of the country, beyond the sentiment of the country, beyond the shadow of a doubt, is in favor of making the great waterway a distinctively American enterprise. It is too large as a private undertaking, and no doubt the government will have to be a stockholder and stand responsible for the bonds, but with the operation of the canal under with the operation of the canal under federal authority there is little danger
