A well known traveling man said the other day that he was surprised at the lack of system amongst Western business men. In London, for instance, where all business houses close on Saturday, they make weekly collections, and religiously observe all holidays, even the short business hours, there is always a way to transact business with all travelers and still eat meals comfortably. It is simply the difference between the short business hours of the city, and the long business hours of the country. There, every business house has its days, weekly or monthly, on which drummers are received and their samples examined. Here it is "catch as catch can."

For some readers mathematical problems have a peculiar fascination. A young Clifton housekeeper submits the following problem: The result of the sum of a man's age in Catholicism, in electricity, and a dog for $2.50. She took it out for a walk and lost it. She paid $1 reward for its return. The dog was brought back and bought a steamed ham for Sunday's dinner at 20 cents a pound. The cur ran off with the roast, thereby adding to his weight one-half that of the roast. The other half was not fit for use. Since then she three times tried to lose the dog, but couldn't. Finally she paid a man 50 cents for the dog, and the dog's presence. She lost the 50 cents, but not the dog, for he came back. Now, how much was the dog worth, allowing a fair, reasonable price per day for the wear and tear on the lady's nerves?

Robert May had a narrow escape yesterday afternoon during the storm. He was using the Occident hotel telephone when the instrument emitted a vivid flash that illumined the whole office. Mr. May was enveloped in electricity, but miraculously emerged from his perilous position providentially intact, and rapidly recovered his usual spirits. Commenting later on regarding his strange experience, Mr. May remarked that he did not feel concerned. His personal thoughts being for the safety of Chief Leoughery, who was standing close to him at the time. Mr. May relates that he distinctly heard the chief remark "for heaven's sake keep your mouth closed, Bob," and thought he saw him raise both hands. Anxious both gentlemen received the congratulatory expressions of their numerous friends who happily escape from what seemed to all present an imminently dangerous position.

MENU FOR SATURDAY.

Breakfast. Sliced and Toasted Oranges. Wheatmeal. Eggs and Butter. Fried Beef and Sugar with Egg Sauce. Biscuits. Coffee.

Luncheon. Stewed Eggs, Water. Cakes, Tea. Dinner. Mutton Soup. Baked Ham. Mashed Potatoes. Lima Beans. Stewed Celery. Water. Cheese. Orange Puff.

A very appetizing and not particularly nutritious breakfast is made by shredding a fifteen cent piece of sliced smoked beef and frying in butter; pour on squares of buttered toast and pour thereon a pint of white sauce in which has been stirred three hard boiled minced eggs.

Stewed Eggs—Cut in two inch pieces, sprinkle with salt and scald with boiling water. After five minutes drain and dry on a napkin; dredge with flour. Put a tablespoonful of butter in a chafing dish, with a tablespoonful of minced onion, a bit of bay leaf, two cloves and a leaf of celery; add the eggs and a pint of hot water. They will be done in twelve minutes, owing to the intense and even heat of the chafing dish.

Have a ham cut in two and the shank end level and tied strongly; wash and scrub well with salt and water. Cook the fleshy side with a thick paste of flour and water and lay it in a pan and bake twenty-five minutes for each pound.

Dried Lima beans must be covered with cold water and allowed to swell on the back of the stove for three hours; then cook very slowly for several hours until done, and add butter and cream.

Mrs. Rogers' orange puffs are delicious. Put a half pint of water over the fire, with two ounces of butter when melted stir in one-half pint of flour; cook until it forms a loaf; take from the fire and when slightly cooled stir in the yolk of four eggs, the grated rind of an orange, two tablespoonfuls of the juice, and then well beaten whites. Put this into a greased custard cup and bake in a rather quick oven for thirty minutes. Eat with liquid sauce.
