The Puget found towage war came to an et i yesterday when the little clipper tur in the joined the combination, as the Puget Sound Towboat Company is called. The Magic was owned in Seattle by Captain H. H. Morrison, Bogart, Degough and others, and her purchasers paid $11.69 and others, and her purchasers paid $11,000 for her. In company with the tug Discovery, which is owned by Rothschild & Co., of Port Townsend, the Magic was proving to be an aggressive competitor, and the big boats sought to drive the opposition, as the Magic, Discovery and British tug Lorne were termed, to the well and insurented an era of slashing. British tug Lorne were termed, to the wall, and inaugurated an era of slashing of rates. By judicious management the opposition secured the most profitable tows. The combination had orders to cut under any rates proposed by the Magle or Discovery, and it resulted in the latter tugs often proposing to work for one-third of the prevailing rates, realising that they would be underbid in any event. All of this tended to bring about cheap towages, and to demorralize Gentlemen:-I had occasion to use several boxes of Krause's Headache Capsules while traveling to Chicago to attend the National Democratic Convention. They acted like a charm in preventing headaches and dizziness. Have had very little headache since my return, which is remarkable.

Yours, respectfully

JOHN U. SHAFFER, any event. All of this tended to bring about cheap towages, and to demoralize the business, but vessel owners were accordingly elated. For instance, the brig Courtney Ford was towed last Sunday from Port Townsend to Tacoma and thence to sea by the tug Wanderer for $75; the Chilean bark Oscar Herra from Dungeness to Port Blakeley and thence to sea for $225; the schooner Elizabeth Zane from Port Townsend to Olympia and back to sea for $225.
