ENGLAND AND GERMANY.

Why does England stand alone? To this natural question there are the most comprehensive answers. England has incurred the jealousy of every power. At every turn of the map she runs across the path of some other nation. She squais down at Germany's very door, she menaces France and Spain, she bars the progress of Russia, and only recently she has been needlessly arogant to the United comprehensive answers. England has has been needlessly arogant to the United States. Commercially she is supreme. and that commercial supremacy is a constant irritation to the men on the Rhins as well as to the Rhong. They may disagree on everything else, but on one subject the French and Germans are unanimous—hatred of England. The other reason for lingiand's isolation is that it is her traditional policy to have no alliances except when the received when the stone would probably have been taken for a relic of the liking settlers of Normanidy. no alliances except when the necessities of the case compel her to form a coalition for a specified purpose. THE MORMON SNAKE

One of the first things to be expected upon the declaration of Utah statehood was the rumor that polygamy had been or was about to be revived. It is startling, however, to find the first announcement of this coming from the lips of a bishop, who, while in Kansas for the purpose of making proselytes to the Mormon church, has been interviewed by the correspondent of a reliable Eastern paper and is reported as saying that polygamy has never really been given up, and that one of the first acts of the Mormon church on the proclamation of statehood would be the solemnizing of these suspended rites. "Yes," he says, "this ceremonial will be resumed, in fact, it has never been entirely suspended. I have three wives, all of whom love me. During recent years the relations between Germany and England lave been unsettled. When the first William was emperor of Germany, England felt no fear from that quarter. During the all too short reign of his son, Loudon and Berlin worked in concert, but since the accession of his grandson, the present emperor, British statesmen have recognized a new element of danger. "William of Germany," to quote a member of the diplomatic corps, "has one quality which makes any man great, although sometimes it is a greatness of a peculiar."

There are twines sold to fishermen on the Columbia river that stand in the same relationship to Marshall's Twine as a wooden image does to the numan being-they lack strength-life evenness-and lasting qualities. Don't fool yourself into the belief that other twines besides Marshall's will do "just as well." They won't. They cannot.
