CLAIRVOYANCE. Mrs. Burgess Wheeler, Clairvoyant and Magnet Healer, Room 2, Hotel Tiche. NEECAPNEY ROAD. Astoria, Or., March 20, 1896. Editor Astorian: An effort is being made now to raise funds for the building of a wagon road between Arch Cape and Nehalem City, a distance of seven to nine miles. A considerable amount has already been raised, and the merchants of this city will probably be asked to donate liberally towards the fund. It is expected the opening of this road will bring to Astoria a trade which hitherto finds its way to Tillamook and Portland. Some time ago the county and abandoned a road up the Nehalem to a point on the Nehalem five miles above the city by that name, and an effort was made to construct a road over that route. An effort is being made now by the very small minority of the people of the Nehalem country to finish this road, as surveyed by the county and abandoned the road recently laid out back of the Necarney mountain. While it is not expected they will be successful, it would be well for the people to unite in getting the latter road through as it is a cheaper and much better road from the Nehalem to this city. A day or two ago Mr. James Maher and Mr. Cloutier blazed a road from Arch Cape to Nehalem which is over a very easy grade and can be constructed at a comparatively small expense. The people of Nehalem Beach and Necarney are standing together in their effort at pushing this road through, and I think with little assistance from the people of this city they will be able to succeed. It is a matter of more importance to Astoria than one who is not thoroughly familiar would surmise, and when fishermen give a splendid thoroughfare across the entire county to the Nehalem River, the newspapers of this city should urge the encouragement of this enterprise.
