The mishaps of the ship com-menced with the liness of Captain Cong-don, and he was left ashore at St. Helena, the voyage proceeding with Mate Harvey in command. She was next dis-covered by a Virginia pilotboat aground a few miles above Cape Henry, and as a heavy sea was running which the crew were afraid would swamp the ship, they abandoned her and wers landed by the pilotboat at Fortress Monros. Mean-while the Baltimore pilots had heard of the stranding and arrived on the scene with their steamer just in time to find the ship a derellet. So heartily was the quarrel taken up on either side, and so fierce and fre-quent were the fights between Jack Tar and the soldiers, that the authorities deemed it advisable to remove the Fox from Portsmouth to Spithead. authence, and gave ner permission to be present at the private mass celebrated by the pope himself in his private chapel on New Year's day. A few days after-ward the singer was presented to the sire, and sang a few songs at the Quiri-nal.

Shortly afterward it was ordered out to Burmah: so was the Fiftleth, but by transport. A great part of the crew were detailed for land service. They crossed the Irra-waddy to where the Fiftieth were sta-tioned, and surprised the commanding officer by a request to present a pullior. This he consented to hear, and found that it was nothing less than that they should be allowed to go into action side by side with their late enemies, the Fiftioth! The one knew the sterling fighting qualities of the other. Tommy Atkins held out his hand, and the quarrel was forgotten.
