Inquiry at the headquarters of the fish-ermen's union yesterday evening elicited the right that there was no change in the situation as to fishing. The men all say that they must have their price. Sec-retary Jessen stated that notwithstand-ing the rumous flying plant town, there ing the rumors flying about town, there is no truth, up to the present, in the statement that there will be fishing on Monday, or that a certain cannery has agreed to pay five cents, per pound. Should any of the packers conclude to pay the price asked by fishermen, the office of the union would be the first place to receive notice of such action. In the justice's court Thursday three boys were tried for stealing bottles from the Astoria Soda Works. One of the hoys was quite young, and, as it was his first offense, he was discharged. The others, Raymond Johnsing, a colored youth, and Eddie Hill, were sentenced to the reform school, the latter being re-leased on the condition that the sen-tences would be imposed if he was again arrested for the same offense. The Johnsing lad was given three years. This young gentleman is a typical negro boy, apart from his stealing proclivities, and has been quite popular with the boys since his arrival in this city several months ago. Mr. Johnsing, Sr., is well satisfied with the court's action.

Judging by the advance sale of seats the opera house will be crowded. Those be an immediate and tremendous strinkage of all values, and of labor the most of all. Few who were in debt compay, but when things really got to the worst, the opportunity for the wealthy to purchase at great bargains would be immense. Thus the already rich would become vastly richer, and the present inequality be greatly licreased. There would be a general bankruptey, and for a few years labor would be a drur. Severe as was the pante of 193, it was comparatively but a mere step (and then arrested) in the direction indicated. After weary months and years business would slowly emerge from the wreck and chaos.

But in the meantime another current would have started. The silver of the world would be dumped upon the United. States, and with greatly increased mint service, in perhaps three or four years, an inflation would begin to make itself felt. But, even then, the increase in values would only be seculing and nominal, for the basis would be silver. For-eign exchange would be about 100 per cent premium, and all the rise would be only apparent and deceptive The final effect of this inflation would be still again to make the rich richer and the poor poorer. All kinds of commodities would nominally rise, out what of the man who had no commodities? The property of the millionaire would be subled (nominally) and the man who before had nothing would have twice Wages, in time, would apparently louble, like everything else, but they are always last of the procession. Long-before that time, every commodity that the laboring man needs would have doubled, and, therefore, he would be not only relatively, but positively, worse off unscrupulous duancier, the wrecker and the shrewd operator would fatten, for they always can take advanture of violent fluctuations, whether upward or lownward. All wage earners, people on salaries, and every producer, as well as all legiti-mate business, would suffer, both during the great depression and the final inflation. Unsettled conditions, of whatever nature, always lodge more of the fixed wealth of the country in the nands of those who already have the advantage. We already have a practical bimetal-lism, if that be construed as meaning the two metals in liberal supply. This
