We are unalterably opposed to any scheme that will give to this country a depreciated or debased currency. We favor the use of silver as currency, but to the extent only and under such restrictions that its parity with gold can be maintained.

"A year ago, in Thomsaville, Ga., Major McKinley, when offered the delegates of three Southern states if he would declare for free silver, said, in the presence of the editor of this journal: 'If the Republican platform declares for free silver, I will not be a candidate, I would not run on a free silver platform.'"

"If our people were isolated from all others, and if the question of our currency could be treated without regard to our relations to other countries, its character would be a matter of comparative little importance. If the American people were only concerned in the maintenance of their physical life among themselves, they might return to the old days of barter, and in this primitive manner acquire from each other the materials to supply the wants of their existence. But if American civilization were satisfied with this, it would abjectly fall in its high and noble mission."

TWO DIFFERENT VIEWS. "He hasn't got the votes, and can't get them," is the prophecy that ex-Senator Thomas C. Platt makes concerning the possible nomination of Major McKinley by the Republicans.

"No human power can stop McKinley" is the terse way that General Grosvenor views the situation. Two views, so diametrically opposed to each other, must have some ground for their utterance. Mr. Platt declares that General Grosvenor is convicted by the figures that he puts out. In the convention, 460 votes will be needed to nominate, and he maintains all that McKinley has that he can rely upon is 225-250 short of a nomination.

The picture painted by General Grosvenor is of a different hue. He doesn't even doubt but Major McKinley will have a majority in the convention, no matter how the contested seats may go. He places more faith in the integrity of those who have been pledged to McKinley than that they will be recreant to the trust reposed in them. In addition to the 56 claimed by him in a table he presents, he feels confident of 20 votes on the first ballot east of the Alleghenies, not enumerated in the total. Of the 60 contested seats, Mr. McKinley's manager says he has assurances that several intended contestants have informed him that they do not intend to prosecute the claims they made. General Grosvenor intimates that he is modest in counting on 90 delegates of those remaining to be elected. Summing up, he sees the choice of McKinley on the first ballot, with votes to spare.

THE BIMEFALLIST'S DREAM. A silver paper, the Idaho Daily Statesman, says: The real basis of the contention of the bimetalists is the fact that the opening of the mints to free coinage would all once make available all the silver held in any form, and it would all be counted in the money basis of the nation. The base would be doubled in dimension and prices of products would gradually rise in proportion.

Those who are now so eager to see prices rise sky-high might be sorely disappointed at the result. To say little of the panic which would certainly follow the enactment of a free coinage law, its effect on prices would be disastrous in the Western and Southern states, whence the chief claims for free silver now come. The rise of the prices of all that farmers and planters buy would be tremendous, but the prices of farm products and the wages of labor would rise last, and but slowly, and by no means in proportion to the immensely enhanced cost of living. Moreover, free coinage would strike a terrible blow on the export trade in American agricultural products and provisions. If the farmers and planters can now be fooled by their politicians into the adoption of a new and depreciated money system, by which they will be paid nominally more, but actually less, for their surplus products than they now receive, they will suffer untold losses. The only classes, if any, that could profit by free coinage are the bankers and manufacturers, and the losses they would sustain from the general crash of business and industry consequent upon the insane experiment of free silver would probably more than counterbalance any temporary gain they might derive from it.

The friends of Major McKinley have maintained all along that he is for sound money, while his enemies have professed that his record is not as sound as could be desired. Those who have been uneasy on this score will no doubt be reassured by Gen. Alger, who has just returned from a visit to McKinley's home, and had an interview with him. Gen. Alger said he found him well pleased with the existing situation. "There can be no doubt," said Mr. Alger, "where McKinley stands on the financial question. He is for sound money and for protection. There has been some talk regarding his financial views, but I am personally aware that they are for sound money. It is stated that Gen. Alger will visit New York to assure eastern men of the certainty of McKinley's favor for sound money."

"What is now needed more than anything else is a plain and simple presentation of the argument in favor of 'sound money.' In other words, it is a 'time for the great American people to reason together as members of a great nation which can promise them a continuance of protection and safety only so long as its solvency is unquestioned, its honor unscathed and the soundness of its money unquestioned. These things are ill-exchanged for the illusions of a debased currency, and the groundless hope of advantages to be gained by a disregard of our financial credit and commercial standing among the nations of the world."

One of the attractions of our climate is the great variety of weather it can furnish within a brief period. We have gone abruptly from winter to summer and back again twice within a month, and yesterday we had summer in great shape.

IN THE GRIP OF BOSSSES.

Scheme to Keep Fishermen on Shore to Prevent Losing Their Votes.

A gentleman from the Washington side of the lower Columbia, quite familiar with the trouble now existing between the fishermen and the packers, arrived at the city yesterday and registered at one of the hotels, where he was seen by a business man whose interests centered in the revenues that the fishermen derive from their labor, he objected to his name being used in connection with the fishermen. His standing, however, is such that he and his thorough knowledge, gained by years of experience of the political situation in Oregon and Washington, gives insight into the intricacies of the situation.

"The fish industry is one that affects not a community, but the entire state. It involves millions of dollars in capital and labor, and its failure means general losses throughout the whole state. I don't think the public generally understands the great importance of the industry to Portland and Oregon, and the fact that the whole grip of the present senseless strike rests on a political issue, stands the great importance of the industry as pawns by the politicians of Clatsop county to pull the chestnuts out of the political fire next June. The fishermen, I am satisfied, would long since have accepted the reduced rate and so to work had it not been for certain political bosses, who cunningly worked the men to the point of holding out on false hopes that the packers would eventually have to give in and pay the five cents demanded by the fishermen's union. The whole thing is being engineered by four men. These are the cardinals from Clatsop county are manipulating the union and making the fishermen believe that they will be continued, just now it suits them to keep all the fishermen on shore until after the election. If the men were to go to work, and the bulk of them, on election day, would be on the water, and their votes would be lost. This lesson was learned by experience either two or four years ago, at which election the packers were defeated by about 200 votes, being about the number of men who were on the river fishing, and who could not come in to cast their votes."

"This year, in order to get a pinch on all the men, the strike has been fostered and the men so worked up that nothing short of 5 cents will be accepted. The bosses are equally aware that the packers cannot possibly pay the 5 cents, as they are losing figures, and with the two elements at dagger points, the political bosses have engineered the time in the last few months in keeping the elements apart, namely, by successfully urging the fishermen to hold out for five cents. This time will be continued until after the election, when, with every fisherman's vote cast where wanted, it will be found convenient to show the fishermen that as the season is well advanced, four cents would better be accepted, and so discourage a continuance of the strike and let the men shift for themselves."

"You mark my words. It is a deep game those politicians are playing, and so far they have been so successful that it has made them a little doubtful, and they have been talking on the side a little too much for their own good. They expect to have every fisherman at the polls, and as the poor ignorant devils are half-starved down there, they will be ready to vote any way they are told. After election they will be dropped, and they will then be of no further use to them."

"Today the fishermen's union held a meeting in Astoria to again consider the proposition whether or not they would accept the four cents or hold out. I saw a dispatch received by a business man in this city about an hour ago, which confirm what I have told you, namely, that the meetings are being manipulated by political bosses, who are anxious that the men shall continue to hold out. The dispatch I saw reads something as follows: "Fishermen have refused the proposition made by the Fishermen's Packing Company."

"The poor devils can't see that they themselves are caught in a political net, which will hold them until after the election, when they will be turned loose to shift for themselves."

The following story is told of the courtship of Mr. Dismal, afterward Lord Beaconsfield, and Mrs. Wyndham Lewis: Mrs. Lewis was living near Cardiff, when through the window she saw Mr. Dismal approaching, and ordered the servant to ask for him. "But I don't know when she will be back," urged the mail. "Neither do I," philosophically replied he, "but I am going to wait till she comes back; so make me some tea." He did wait, he got his tea, and he married the widow.

A DISASTROUS FAILURE. Financial convulsions which disturb the equilibrium of the business world are productive of far less mischief than the failure of the kidneys to perform the office assigned them by nature. When these organs become inactive the circulation acquires impurities which bring on dropsy, diabetes, Bright's disease, gravel, catarrh of the bladder and other maladies. To impart to the kidneys a healthy impetus, very different from the excitement produced by an unmedicated alcoholic stimulant, the most delicate and safe, the most efficient remedy for inactivity of the kidneys is also of the greatest service in malaria, dyspepsia, bilious and rheumatic troubles, and has received the qualified sanction of eminent physicians. The nervous, the elderly and infirm and convalescents derive unpeakable benefit from its use. Use it with persistence and at fixed intervals, and anticipate with confidence the happiest results.

After election they will be dropped, and they will then be of no further use to them.'"
