is located at the terminus of the Astoria and Columbia River Railroad, at the mouth of the Columbia River.

It fronts on the deep water of the Columbia River narbor, and being perfectly protected from wind and seas, affords the very best docks for ships on this bay; therefore, it is the exact spot for the seaport of the great Northwest.

These facts were recognized by the Astoria & Columbia River Railroad Co. when

New Astoria Was Selected as the Starting Point for their Railroad and the Location for the Terminals.

One of the latest rumors current in certain circles, is that a definite plan for the formation of a hotel syndicate in Astoria proper, is gotting well along towards completion. Doubtless the best elements of the business community here resilize that such an efficiency is of prime necessity in view of the material growth that may be hoped for in the near future. It is asserted that the question of profits hardly enture into the consideration of the project of building a hotel for Astoria, for like the days of the old shacks in Portland, it has been found that adequate means of housing and entertaining strangers who may come to this port, not only with a view of in-vesting in permanent improvements, but even upon the most casual business must be provided. If such a betel barely earns its own expenses, it is a paying invest-ment to the community, and those who are less posted say that the scheme can-not be too quickly marginated.

In Medieval Days

When people wanted anything the knell down and prayed for it. How-ever, that was some time ago. Along about 1900 a fellow named disten-berg, who had come de Rhins over," was monkeying around a carpenter shop in Lents. He whit-tled some little blocks and setually made an alphabet. Then he rigged a sort of-well, a machine that would look something like our let-ter press of today. He arranged his blocks in order, put some ink on them, also a piece of paper, and then screwed his press down. That was called printing. Old Gittenberg made a bowling success of the rucket, and his head became so swollen that he really smulbed the king one day. The king averlooked it, however, for he had an idea. what kind of fellows printers would be. Well, finally they got the printing system down put, and, as the centuries rolled by, began printing newspapers-first person, invariably singular number, any gender and hard case.

columns, devoted to small advertise-ments. If a fellow wapts anything— trouble, a wife, a house—don't make any difference what it is—he can get it by means of a small ad. Included in the "wan!" column are "For Belle." "For Rent," "Lost," "Found," "Stolen" and "Miscel-laneous." Now, just see what chumps some people are! Why, a man has been known to hunt over columns, devoted to small advertise man has been known to hunt over a city-this city-for days looking for a house in which to live. Had he come to The Astorian office and asked for a want ad, he could have gotten his house without the least bit of trouble and for about 25 cents.

It Is Needless To tell of The Astorian's circula The paper has been established for a quarter of a century. Why, old Concomiy read the first rumor of the building of a railroad to his braves from it. Circulation is The Astorian's long suit. Consequently, when a fellow comes into The Astorian office, looks pleasant, throws down 25 cents on the counter and says he wants a house, he
