ORIENTAL TRADE.

A gentleman in the mercantile business from St. Louis yesterday made the datement that after earefully canvassing the business of the Pacific coast ie was firmly of the opinion that within the next few years, in the absence of a high protective tariff, brokers engaged in Oriental business would be enabled to make fortunes. In buying silks, teas, bric-a-brac, and cotton goods, the latter being made of American raw cotton, manufactured in Chi na and Japan, and shipped back to
