If the good ship bearing the first of the iron for the Astoria and Columbia River Rallway arrives in the next two days, it looks very much like the road from Seaside to Astoria will be finishished by the 5th of July, at least so far as the Flavel dock. A small-sized tidal wave visited Elk Creek and Cannon beaches a few days ago that was probably the tail-end of the huge wall of water that swept the western coast of Vancouver Island following the great earthquake disturbances in Japan. Mr. Samuel Maddock, who was an eye-witness to the Elk Creek visitor, describes it as follows:

"I was on the south side of the creek at the time, near the pontoon bridge, toward the ocean for the cause. FLAVEL RAILROAD UNDER WAY

In Six Days Cars Will Be Hunning-New Cars on the Lay-Big Dock Getting Well Along Hotel Beady for the Roof.

John V. Creighton, of the Northern Pacific, Portland; E. F. Barnes, of San Francisco, Walter C. Smith, J. M. Turney, and L. B. Seeley, of Portland; S. H. Brown, Jr., of Boston, and D. K. Warren yesterday made a trip of in spection over the branch road from Warrenton to Flavel, and at the latter place viewed the new hotel and big lock now under construction.

Rapid progress is being made along the line and the contractors at Flavel are doing good work. The rails being unloaded from the sunken barge will soon be laid in the branch track which Superintendent Lester expects to finish in a weeks' time. The Dwyer, which carried the party to Warrenton, towed a barge load of spikes switch stands, connections and frogs and the work of laying the track from just now, and what with arranging for additional trains, laying of the rails across the bridge, and completing the repairs on the old line, he has little time for loafing. There was much disappointment yesterday when the ships, which had just arrived, passed Warrenton and it was seen that they were not the ones with railroad rails. At Alder creek the men have cleared a large tract and will soon have the thirty acres, where the shops, roundhouse, car shops, water tanks, blacksmith shop, turn tables and side tracks for the grain cars are to be located, ready for the engineers and architects.
