The man who honestly believes in free coinage of silver, says the Globe Democrat, is a man who has not investigated the subject, and if he can be induced to consider it carefully, he will vote the other way.

It is a significant fact that the four states whose delegates bolted the Republican convention at St. Louis represented $30,000,000 of the $60,000,000 total silver production of the country, according to the mint statistics of 1894.

Bryan manages to obtain a respectful hearing from Eastern audiences by a sort of parade and false pretense of great sincerity in his labored defense of the Altgeld platform, but his Western managers continue their efforts to delude ignorant voters by inventing and circulating the most monstrous lies and fake statistics concerning the money question. Among their earlier efforts along this line were the publication of the forged statement purporting to have come from Abraham Lincoln, and a garbled extract from one of Blaine's speeches. Now the Populist press is reeking with comments on a pretended quotation from "The London Financial News," of March 19, in which the loss of British trade with South America, China, and Japan was forecast as a consequence of national folly in allowing the United States to get ahead of England in the adoption of bimetalism. The alleged extract itself has been sent out to Democratic-Populist journals in all the Western states. It is pronounced a forgery by "The Financial News" of August 13, which refers explicitly to it, and says: "No such article was ever printed by us and its whole tenor is directly opposed to the view we have taken of the effect of free silver in the United States. So far from advocating free silver coinage, we have persistently pointed out that it spells repudiation, and the withdrawal of all European capital."

It is astonishing how the turgid sophistries of Bryan's speeches melt away before the simple statements of McKinley's letter and the clear, convincing argument of ex-President Harrison's address. Even the dulcet can now see that when Bryan talks about the power and resources of the government in connection with the value of the silver dollar under free coinage, he is either attempting to mislead unthinking people or else proclaims himself a shallow, unthinking man. The silver dollar we now have—although worth but little more than fifty cents—is equal in purchasing power to 100 cents in gold because the government is pledged by law to maintain this parity with gold. Under free coinage, as the very expression signifies, this prop would be removed, since it is the measure with gold of which the silver advocate complains and seeks by free coinage to evade. The silver dollar would thus be left to shift for itself and, except in the payment of such existing debts as are stipulated to be paid in gold, it must necessarily circulate at its intrinsic value alone. The disturbance of prices and the readjustment of values which would follow a legal tender dollar worth only half as much as the one now used in trade would produce a panic such as the country has never yet seen. This even Mr. Bryan himself has several times admitted. When we had gone through all this violent assertion and disruption of business, and settled down to the new basis, if we ever did, we would be just where we started without one particle of gain to anybody but dishonest debtors and the silver miners whose product the mints had in the meanwhile coined.

FREE SILVER AND WAGES.

Four years ago the workmen were urged to vote for low tariff, on the plea that if the "tariff wall" were broken down, our manufacturers with free raw material would "capture the markets of the world," that they would be able to employ more labor; that this alleged increased demand for labor would cause a rise in wages; that the low tariff would enable them to buy the necessities of life cheaper; and they therefore be more prosperous.

We do not need to explain the fallacy of this argument. Every workman knows all about it, from dear experience. The same sort of sophistry is being used this year to delude the workman into voting for free silver. We have before us a screed written by an individual in this city, which rehearses the old story of four years ago. He tells the workman that free silver will give employment to a million more men in the silver mines; that we will also get the markets of the silver countries, thereby making a greater demand for our own products; that more men being employed will increase the prices of all products, labor included.

This is quite as fallacious as the free trade argument of 1892. But there is a statement by a Southern Democrat, made a few days ago in New York city, which tells the truth about the matter. The Southerner is an advocate of free silver, and this is the argument he uses to show why the Democratic party should adopt it:

"It seems to me that my fellow Democrats are blind. I cannot understand why they hesitate for one moment to endorse free silver. As a party we favor the widest possible trade. We want to push our products into all the markets of the world, and the only thing which stands in the way of our doing so is the high price of labor."

"Everything that we grow and make goes down in price. But while everything else has declined in cost, our labor still sticks at the old prices, and there doesn't seem to be any way to bring labor down except through some sort of protracted revolution."

"Free silver, however, would solve the question in an hour. It wouldn't advance the price of any kind of labor because all labor is now at inflation prices, and just as high as it would be under any conditions."

"But if free silver were adopted, we would pay labor in fifty-cent dollars. That would cut labor in half at once, thus fetching it down to the plane of everything else."

"This accomplished, we would be in shape to successfully compete with any nation for the markets of the world. Therefore, I can't see why our party does not at once and entirely endorse free silver, because by so doing we should be able to establish our commercial supremacy among the nations of the earth."

The only reason our manufacturers cannot compete in "the markets of the world" with Great Britain, Belgium, and other manufacturing nations of Europe, is because wages are higher here. The main factor in cost of production is the wages of labor. Cut that in two, and we can undersell Great Britain and any other country except Japan.

The prosperity of the nation depends on the buying ability of the masses of the people—the workmen. Free silver will cut wages practically in two. That will mean that our people must live on a much lower and more economical scale. Let any man now receiving regular wages figure out how he could live on half his present wages, and he will have an idea of what free silver will do for him.
