THE LEWIS AND CLARK EXCURSION

Large Number of Officials and Citizens Accept Hospitality of the Farmers.

GOOD ROADS MUST COME

Addresses Made by Mayor Taylor, W. J. Ingalls, Judge Gray and Others Favoring a Bridge Instead of a Ferry Across the River.

In response to the invitation of the Ingalls Brothers and other settlers on the Lewis and Clarke river and vicinity, a number of citizens and taxpayers boarded the steamer Mayflower yesterday morning for the purpose of traversing the new road from Hoes' landing on the west bank of Young's river to Clatsop City station on the line of the Seaside railroad. The party from the city consisted of Hon. Frank J. Taylor, mayor; Councilmen Jas. W. Welch, W. F. McGregor, F. L. Parker, and A. Schneckau; Hon. J. H. D. Gray, county judge; Ben. Ward, county treasurer, and Grand Jurors W. E. Joplin, Ed. O'Connor and W. J. Loomis; Messrs. J. C. Trullinger, C. S. Wright, J. B. Wyatt, E. C. Holden, M. Ford, W. T. Chatter, O. Sover, Horace Thing, G. V. Porter, E. L. Rector, P. A. Stokes and A. C. Fisher.

A quick run was made across Young's Bay to Hoes' landing, where were found waiting several commodious wagons with fine teams attached ready to convey the visitors over the new road. At 10:45, shortly after passing the fine farms of W. E. Dement, J. W. Reith and Mr. Ingalls, the upper school house was reached and here a halt was made for rest and refreshment. For the latter ample provision had been made, both as to quantity and quality, by the wives and daughters of the settlers who were present to preside over the bountifully laden tables. After having amply satisfied the inner man, the guests were invited into the school house for the purpose of exchanging views in regard to the new road and what was now required in order that it might have unbroken connection with Astoria; and thus the farmer would be able to bring his produce in his own conveyance to market.

Mr. Welch, Ingalls presided at the meeting, and in well chosen words explained the object the settlers had in view in inviting the county and city officials and tax-paying citizens of Astoria to come over and view the road they had laid out and virtually completed as far as land travel was concerned. They had now an opportunity of judging for themselves whether the work had been done well or not. Mr. Ingalls spoke of his determination years ago that the settlers in that fertile section of the county should have a good road all the way to the county seat and a market. He had never lost sight of it. And now, notwithstanding all the hindrances and discouragements, they had, with very little aid from the county, less than $600, built a good road to the water all ready for summer travel, and the paramount question now is will the county complete the connection, either by bridge or ferry. For himself, he favored a bridge as the most permanent and the most economical in the end. The gentleman said he would like to get an expression of opinion from others present and called upon the Hon. F. J. Taylor, who responded.

Mr. Taylor said he had heard much about this road, but had never been over it before and was very much pleased that he had now done so. He was both gratified and surprised to find such an amount of work had been accomplished and so well done. No country can prosper without good roads. Astoria has suffered loss for the want of them, and notwithstanding the railroad you cannot build up Astoria without good roads to afford easy and direct communication with your farming settlements. This new road was of more importance than might at first appear. From observation and personal knowledge of this section he knew that roads could be built on easy grades at comparatively little expense, from many other settlements within a radius of a mile or two which could be connected with this new road. No public money can be better invested than in building good roads and he acknowledged himself a convert to the opinion that this road must be carried on to completion. He favored a bridge as better and cheaper in the long run than a ferry. He was told that an offer to build the bridge with a ninety foot draw for $4,500 had been made and he did not believe the tax payers of Clatsop county would object to the investment for the public good.

Judge Gray being called upon endorsed the remarks and opinions of the mayor. He believed that roads should be opened up to all settlements in the county west of Young's river. He did not think a bridge with a ninety foot draw could be constructed for $4,500, but he was decidedly in favor of a bridge as against a ferry, and he was sure the county court would favor it if the tax-payers called for it. He called attention to the fact that an act of congress would have to be passed to obtain permission to build the bridge and in view of an early session of the county court he recommended that preliminary steps should be taken by the settlers at once.

Messrs. J. C. Trullinger, Jas. W. Welch, E. C. Holden, L. Parker, W. F. McGregor, and B. Van Dusen were all called upon and responded with words of commendation for the road they had traveled over, and endorsement of an early completion of the good work begun by the construction of a connecting bridge. The meeting was closed with a hearty vote of thanks from the Astoria party to the settlers who had arranged the pleasant trip, and to their wives and daughters for the plentiful spread of good things.

Meek credit is due to Messrs. Ingalls, Dow, Ldike, Elmore, Heckard and others, who furnished the excellent teams and vehicles for the pleasant journey of ten and one-half miles through tide-land and timber, landing all safely at Clatsop City station shortly after 3 o'clock, where at 3:30 they took the train for home.

COMMITTED SUICIDE.

Alice McElroy, a courtesan, endeavored to commit suicide last night. After becoming intoxicated she swallowed a quantity of carbolic acid, and at midnight was at the point of death. Dr. Estes, the attending physician, says that, owing to Miss McElroy's condition he could not state whether the dose would prove fatal or not, but seemed to despair of saving her life. The unfortunate woman has made several attempts at self-destruction, but was always discovered in time and saved. Her parents live in San Francisco, where the woman was born. She is 25 years of age.
