THE HISTORY OF SILVER COINAGE

Eloquent Address of President M. E. Ingalls in the Chicago Auditorium.

HE IS AN OLD-TIME DEMOCRAT

But Makes an Earnest and Able Plea for Sound Money and National Honor—The Experiences of the Past a Guide for the Future.

Speaking to 3,500 railway men at the Auditorium, in Chicago, a few days ago, M. E. Ingalls, president of the Big Four and Chesapeake and Ohio railroads, delivered a masterly address on the money question.

The following are extracts from Mr. Ingalls' speech: Let us look at the history of our own country. In 1792, after we came out of the war with England, our currency was in the most deplorable condition in the world.

In 1828 the Great Andrew Jackson came upon the scene—a man who is supposed to have been a Democrat and an honest man, until he has given another account of him. He had a friend in the United States congress by the name of Thomas H. Benton, who was in the United States senate for thirty years.

If you will take Benton's speeches you will find he thought this question all over; he repeatedly stated that our ratio was wrong and that we had no gold in this country, and the result was that in 1834 a new ratio was established at 16 to 1, and in making that ratio they overvalued gold just as much as they did silver before.

Now consider this: Alexander Hamilton overvalued silver about 3 per cent; Thomas H. Benton overvalued gold about 4 per cent, and yet so unerring was the law of trade that in the first place it drove out silver and in the next place it drove out gold.

Let me give you an illustration: If you have $100 of gold in your pocket and $100 in silver, and they are both equal for the payment of debts, but the gold can be sold to the money changer for $105, if you owe $100 to a man what money are you going to pay him in? You are going to pay him in the silver and keep the gold.

My friends, I told you what happened in 1792 in this country and again in 1834. In 1861 we had a little unpleasantness and both sides went to issuing shillings.

In 1865, when the war ended, the government paid up its obligations, except the greenbacks. In 1874 they undertook to increase the issue and it was only saved by the veto of General Grant.

When Major McKinley returned from his drive to his registering place he found Governor Hale, of Massachusetts among his callers.

Denver, October 8.—A special to the News from Santa Fe, N. M., says: The San Antonio-White Oaks stage was held up today forty miles east of San Antonio in the Oscura mountains.

FAST HORSES. Nellie Bruce a Winner—Louis Victor and Governor Strong Stand a Good Show.

Lexington, Ky., October 8.—The racing was first class today and the track fast. The 2:19 trot and Transylvania are both unfinished, and were postponed until Friday at 11 o'clock.

Such, in brief, is the history of our currency and silver legislation. We have been practically upon a gold basis since 1834, and by law since 1873, and the proposition now presented to the people is "whether we shall change the standard of value which has existed for so many years and establish a new one."

The chief reason urged by Mr. Bryan and his adherents for a change is that these hard times are due to the fact that we have demonetized silver; that we have not circulated enough for the needs of the people.

Chicago, October 8.—Wheat for about an hour after the opening continued to evince a preference for lower prices. The reasons for the weakness were two fold: Liverpool quotations at the opening were below yesterday's closing figures, and Minneapolis and Duluth receipts were again so heavy as to afford those who were inclined to magnify the size of the spring wheat crop with a plausible argument in favor of that contention.

PORTLAND, October 8.—Mayor Penoyer left tonight for Pendleton, where he speaks tomorrow. He proceeded to the Union station several minutes before the time for the O. GEORGIA'S MAJORITY. Atlanta, October 8.—Advices received by the Journal, up to midnight, from combined official and unofficial sources, fix the total Democratic majority at 26,190.
