All communications intended for publication should be directed to the editor. Business communications of all kinds and remittances must be addressed to The Astorian.

The Astorian guarantees to its subscribers the largest circulation of any newspaper published on the Columbia river.

Advertising rates can be had on application to the business manager.

The Weekly Astorian, the second oldest weekly in the state of Oregon, has next to the Portland Oregonian, the largest weekly circulation in the state.

Jno. F. Handley & Co., are our Portland agents, and copies of The Astorian can be had every morning at their stand, 126 Third street.

The "Astorian" hereby offers to donate ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS to St. Mary's Hospital, payable on demand to Father Heisman, whenever legal evidence is produced showing that any afternoon newspaper published in Astoria has printed within the last ninety days anything before this offer a single "special" or other kind of "telegraphic press report," received over the wires entering either of the telegraph offices in Astoria, from any point outside of Oregon.

Astoria, Or., October 15, 1896.

The expansion of loans in the New York banks during the past two weeks by $18,100,000 and the lowering of the rate of interest, with an increase in deposits of $52,196,700, are straws which point to the results rapidly culminating under the restoration of confidence.

There is before the farmers of Clatsop county another field which can profitably be entered by every rancher in this county. The raising of pork in Clatsop, the opinions of old pioneers to the contrary notwithstanding, can be economically conducted and made to pay a handsome profit.

With the people of two counties—Clatsop county, Oregon, and Wabikikum county, Washington, crying for the establishment of a central market in Astoria, and with the best of assurances on the part of both the farmers, business men and consumers, that the market will not only be well patronized, but that it will fill a long-felt need in this community, it is hard to understand why the city authorities and business men of Astoria do not take hold of the proposition and put it through.

It was the New York Sun, we believe, which, in summing up the qualities of each great orator in the last campaign, accorded ex-President Harrison the distinction of being the best general speaker before the American public today. In the opinion of many competent critics, who have commented on the respective ranks of the various prominent orators, as put down on the Sun's list, the ex-president is not honored too highly.

and social relations, and that this is highly developed in a free government like ours; in other words, in a broad sense, we prosper together and we suffer together; we are interdependent. These are considerations which are of particular interest under present conditions, when there has been revealed an undeniable disposition in some quarters to make political capital out of alleged conflicts of interest between classes.

THE "ENDLESS CHAIN."

President Cleveland gave currency to the "endless chain" simile, referring to the presentation of greenbacks to be redeemed in gold, and paying out the greenbacks again for governmental expenses, thus enabling them to be used to draw more gold from the treasury.

A reserve, for the redemption of notes, is always a necessity, to enable the notes to circulate at par. Greenbacks did not rise to par until a gold reserve had been established, and it was possible to get gold on demand by presenting them for redemption.

This is as true of banks of issue as it is of the government. In the old days of state banks, every one of them kept a coin reserve wherewith to redeem such of its notes as might be presented. It is impossible to keep notes in circulation at par, unless the people know they can get them redeemed on demand. They prefer paper to coin, because of its convenience, so long as it is as good as coin.

The possibility is thus always present of a "run" on a bank, or on the treasury, for the redemption of its notes. In such a case, a bank's officers always have it in their power to obtain gold from other sources, to tide them over. The treasury has no way to do this except by issuing bonds.

The bond issues of the present administration were very unpopular. But the people of the United States should understand that a reserve is a necessity, so long as the government continues to issue notes. The only way to utterly stop the possibility of a run on the treasury to obtain gold is for the government to abandon the issue of treasury notes.

Why was there no "run" on the treasury from 1873 to 1887? Simply because the revenues of the government were abundant. Plenty of gold was drawn out of the treasury, but the greenbacks were simply held there, and other money paid out for current expenses.

The Cleveland administration could not do this, because of the lack of other funds. The greenbacks had to be paid out again for government expenses, owing to the lack of sufficient revenue. Hence the greatest protection against the depletion of the treasury gold, and consequently against bond issues to maintain the reserve, is in an ample revenue.

But if the people desire to stop all possibility of bond issues to replenish the reserve, they must abolish the gold reserve, and to do this they must abolish the greenbacks, thus taking the government entirely out of the banking business. So long as it continues to exercise the functions of a bank of issue, it must protect its notes as a bank has to do.

It is a fixed and immutable law that to have good sound health, one must have pure, rich and abundant blood. There is no shorter nor surer route than by a course of DeWitt's Sarsaparilla. Chas. Rogers.

The monstrous sleeve puffs of seasons past are already being very generally anathematized, and are looked upon as excessive and absolutely vulgar, beside the new trim, pert little shoulder excrescences now the rage.

Many of the double wide soft westerns used this year again show the close, effective, dandy surface, woven on the reverse side, that makes them most appropriate for unlined jackets and capes, with gowns matching them in color but of lighter material.

The man who stands idly by and sees the life fading out of his wife's face, seeing her health going, sees her becoming old and faded and wrinkled, when she should still be in the perfect enjoyment of vigorous, useful health, is either less than a man or else does not know of the one remedy that will bring her back to health and strength.

CRYSTALINE, discovered by a German chemist, solidifies under the influence of heat and becomes liquid at temperatures under freezing. It is a compound substance said to consist of equal parts of phenol, camphor and soapine, to which is added a rather small quantity of turpentine or the essence of turpentine.

"Excuse me," observed the man in spectacles, "but I am a surgeon, and that is not where the liver is." "Never you mind where his liver is," retorted the other. A new black fabric for autumn gowns resembles mohair mixed with silk. It is called pol de chevre and comes in brown and delicate shades of gray, and is made up into gowns rather more ornate in style than the conventional tailor dress. It is not unlike Fuyette, and it plays on the skirt and drapes on the bodice and sleeves with charming results.

The number and size of modern manufacturing in Shanghai will surprise those who have not studied this question. There are six large cotton-spinning mills, with 125,000 spindles either working or about ready for operation. There are eight cotton-ginning plants, with 32 to 72 gins each, most of which are running.

The highest wage paid in the Shanghai cotton mills to a native male employe is 50 cents silver (25 cents gold) per day, the lowest 42 cents silver (6 cents gold), while the average is about 38 to 44 cents silver (19% to 22 cents gold). Some of these sums include food. The wage of 50 cents per day is not paid to more than 10 men in 1,000.

The secret of a speedy cure in stoniness lies in selecting the proper remedy and this is difficult to do unless one is sure what the ailment is. But one thing is sure—had the liver been actively at work sickness could not have come. It is then always safe to take Simmons Liver Regulator, which keeps the liver well regulated and all poison expelled from the system.

Nothing so far done with the long-range magazine rifles of today approaches the slaughter achieved with the long-range rifles of the latter part of the last century, and the earlier part of this. Thus it is asserted by an eyewitness that at the battle of Pantony three hundred French guards fell before a single English volley.

There have never been more than three contemporary European queens, in fact the number of women who have occupied thrones in medieval and modern times is comparatively small. England heads the list with five. Russia can boast of four, but the total comes to considerably under thirty altogether.
