CONFUSION IN WASHINGTON.

Senatorial Election Will Be Indefinitely Delayed.

Olympia, January 18.—A conference of the fusionist members of the legislature to discuss the senatorial contest beginning tomorrow was held in the capitol building tonight behind closed doors.

Sixty-nine out of eighty-six fusionists were present and after a lengthy discussion it was decided to issue a call for a caucus for Wednesday night. The stipulations for the caucus, however, will probably prevent one being held. Instead of making the caucus binding, if a majority (fifty-seven members) of the legislature, after their signatures to the call, the middle-of-the-road Populists insisted upon seventy-five signatures before it is effective, and that forty-four votes will be necessary to secure the nomination of any candidate.

The middle-of-the-roaders were supported by Senator Squire's forces in the successful proposition, while Judge Turner's supporters opposed it. This proves that the Turner men are in favor of the caucus on regularly established lines. Halting begins tomorrow and there is no chance whatever of a speedy decision. Judge Turner will probably have the most votes on the first ballot.

FRANCIS CONFIRMED.

Washington, January 18.—Secretary Francis' nomination was confirmed by the senate in executive session today. No opposition to the confirmation was made and no vote was taken. Senator Vest stated that he had not made his objection in the beginning on any personal ground, or because he entertained any but the kindest personal feeling toward Francis, but that he had taken his position in opposition to the confirmation simply as a matter of duty to the Democratic party, which Francis, while professing to be a member of that party, had opposed in the late election.

CLAGGETT STILL OUT.

Boise, Idaho, January 18.—The Populists' caucus this morning determined to vote again for Claggett, a great effort having been made to get Democratic votes enough to give Claggett the necessary 26, but it failed. Result of the first ballot: Claggett, 26; Dubois, 25; George B. Lewis, Populist, 17.

Second ballot—Claggett, 29; Dubois, 25; Nelson, Populist, 13. The votes for Lewis and Nelson were cast by the Democrats. Lewis is secretary of state.

DIPHTHERIA.

Its Symptoms, Prevention, and Treatment.

Astoria, January 18.—(Editor Astorian)—In 1872 I had my first experience with diphtheria. It cost me the life of my first-born, who at the time of his death was nearly a year and a half old, and from that time till now I have studied its symptoms and fought it successfully in my family, sometimes with and sometimes without the aid of the medical fraternity, while my wife and I have nursed its patients, day and night, for weeks at a time. I find a wonderful amount of ignorance in the community outside of the medical fraternity on this most loathsome and fatal and loathsome disease. Feeling as I do that my experience may be of some value to households that may be invaded by the disease, I write some suggestions in the nursing of its patients.

First of all it is possible to adopt preventive measures. Diphtheria thrives on a debilitated condition of the system. First of all, tone up the system, first in diphtheria, we have in some sense a constitutional disease. Keep your table well supplied with fruit. Pineapple juice is almost a sure remedy for diphtheria. Use fresh pineapple if you can secure it; if not, canned will do.

Belladonna, third attenuated homeopathic form, three-drop doses in water three or four times a day is a safe preventative.

But after the disease has made its appearance remember that diphtheria feeds on fever. In so far as you can keep down fever you will weaken the strength of the microbes and retard their increase. Keep away hot poultices. Give the patient ice. Let it dissolve in the mouth, and if any compresses are placed on the throat let it be ice cold water-cloths and change often.

For local application I name two deadly foes to diphtheria. First, powdered dry sulphur, blown upon the fungoid through some hollow tube; and second, pure alcohol, undiluted. Make a swab of flannel and alternate between the sulphur and alcohol, about an hour between each application.

With these simple yet most effective remedies together with the faithful attendance of a good physician, diphtheria need not prove fatal unless the disease find a low state of physical conditions to begin with.

It may not be so easy to prognose the disease, but the following are some of its symptoms. Languor; loss of appetite; swelling of the throat from the ears down towards the shoulders. Rising fever. On examining the throat white patches are found, smooth and glossy, of a color like a boiled egg. This is the fungus, the home of myriads of microbes that increase with amazing rapidity if the blood is permitted to remain at fever heat. Put out the fire as fast as possible and you will stop their growth.

The steamer Columbia arrived down and sailed for San Francisco Sunday morning.

The British ship Duca will sail today for Port Blakely, where she will take on a cargo of lumber.

The British ship Hutton Hall will leave down from Portland this morning in tow of the Oklahoma.

The British steamer Florida, Captain Hansen, arrived yesterday morning from Nanaimo with a cargo of 4,837 tons of coal and 195 tons of coke. Part of the cargo is being discharged in Astoria.

The British bark Beewing, Captain Griffiths, cleared yesterday for Queenstown, Falmouth or Plymouth with a cargo of 38,635 sacks or 87,173 bushels of wheat, valued at $12,000. She was towed down to the lower anchorage about noon and will probably go to sea today.

The British ship Aberystwith Castle, Captain W. D. Perkins, arrived in yesterday from Lota, Chili, with 550 tons of ballast. Captain Perkins says he left Lota November 3, and that he had a fairly good voyage, although bothered considerably by light and contrary winds. He arrived off the mouth of the river twelve days ago and had to stand off on account of bad weather.

For the first time in the history of the Merchants' dry dock two iron vessels, full rigged, were on the ways. One was the Diamond Head and the other the Port Logan. The former was named after the point on the island of Oahu on which she went ashore, and will take her first cargo of lumber to Honolulu, thus passing her namesake (probably without shaking hands) before reaching Honolulu.

The Black Head was bought as a wreck for $200, and after she was got off and safely anchored inside the coral reef, her cargo of coal was sold for $4 a ton.

The Port Logan came in ballast from Cape Town, and will go from here to the Sound in ballast, and from thence to Cape Town again. Just what will be done with her when she reaches that point remains to be seen.—San Francisco Call.

English sailors in port are having a hard time of it, according to the stories that are repeated every day along the docks. So many British vessels are tied up for lack of charters that an excellent opportunity is offered for unscrupulous masters to reduce expenses by getting rid of their men, and, perhaps, at the same time putting a dollar or two into their own pockets.

The story goes that one or two masters of idle ships which owe their forecath hands as high as $80, are starving their crews in order to induce them to desert. Under the English law a sailor ships for the round trip, or a certain term of years, and cannot be discharged at the will of the master. As wages are not paid until the home port is reached, and the forecath hands eat their heads off when the vessel is idle, it has become not an uncommon thing for masters to induce their crews to desert, leaving their wages behind. It is said that the money thus left becomes the property of the master, while he is commended by the shipowner for getting rid of a costly crew. It is said that two masters now in the harbor, unable to get their crews to desert, are furnishing poor food and abusing them so that they will be forced to leave their vessels.—Victoria Colonist.
