The Eastern question, concerning which enough has been written to fill a thousand quarto volumes, is supposed to be simply the question of how the Turk in Europe shall be either held down or driven out. For a quarter of a century or more the govarnments of Europe have been continually threatening to snatch the sultan bald-headed and kick nim across the Bosporus. But whenever one of the powers has become really serious about it the others have promptly intimated their objection to tragedy superseding burlesque in this business. The reason has come out. It transpires that in any master affecting the Turkish empire Russia is the party of the first part, with Frence near by. The growls of the trybund have been unavailing to frighten the czar, and British intrigue has not seduced the sultan into playing Russia faise. If he were to attempt double dealing it would be only necessary for Nicolas to shake that big due bill u der his nose. So far as the other powers are concerned the Eastern / juestion has become a question whether the Turk or the Russ shall rule at Constar that le. The purpose of the present czar is no less ap-
