The logical conclusion from the fact that a good law is not forced. The moral indignation that all tiest plates. good people feel at finding the law disregarded should not be turned against the law, to knock that over, unforcement.

There is a wide difference between neglect of a good law, and legal subattitution of the thing prohibited by the good law. So long as we have the law days, as even tiny cavities cause sume control and close out the evil less they are attended to promptly. That is a power that no community can give up. Under Hoense, however, the community is powerless if the conditions of license are compiled with, not soil or become rancid by exposure as in the city of Clatsop, though two to the air, and which is as perfect a thirds of the people are against it, the substitute for the oil supplied by naman who pays his license claims the ture in youth and health, as modern power of law to run his saloon, and chemistry can produce.

Again, with the law there is a standment. Law is the public conscience, selves with good taste. Certainly a man is half lost who has conscience, but does not obey It.
