EVIL FOR GOOD

Every falsehood is but the corruption of some truth. The greater the falsehood, indeed, the greater the truth. The bigger the lie, the more truth it needs to keep it living. It is an arguhere. Denial of a falsehood may also be a denial of the truth which is in the falsehood

But we let that thought pass. The other one is uppermost,-that it is the best things which, changed in their boid, professed, and ugly evil will selproper nature, become the worst. No soul chooses the evil for itself. Whatever man follows he follows as good, and the temptation always comes to him on some good side.

The hatred, scorn, and wrath against wrong and wrong-doing, which is one of the divine lineaments stamped on humanity, becomes revenge, malice and hate. Generosity, large-heartedness, warm social feeling, become produgality, gluttony, drunkenness and riotous living. Frugality and economy become meanness and miserliness. The whole desire to grow upward, and not downward, to walk the white heights of life among the best, turns into a wretched ambition which speaks toward its end by the dirtiest paths. There is not a noble gift that adorns humanity that has not its hideous "double," hideously like it, hideously unlike it, and in the blindness that falls on an abused conscience, a man loses the power to distinguish, and follows the "double." So imperceptibly does the change take place, so gradually does the virtue change into the vice, the good thing into the misleading and evil thing, that a man goes far, often, before his eyes are open, if they are ever opened

It is the most awful mystery of human nature this, that it touches hell and heaven all its days, that they both lie so near it and that one scems to change so often into the other. To say that men are lost by their virture is not a paradox, though it sounds so, for the virtue changes into vice, and the man follows it still. In how many a man is even the love of wife and children and home-one of the most beautiful things in his nature, changed into an exaggerated seifishness, of which he is the slave in utter ignorance, while he gives his selfishness a sacred name?

Healthy, happy children make better men and women of us all. A little care and a little planning befor birth is often more important than anything that can be done after. On the mother s health and strength depend the life and the future of the children. A weak and sickly woman cannot bear strong and healthy children. Most of the weakness of women is utterly inexcusable. Proper care and proper medleine will cure almost any disorder of the feminine organism. Dr.Pierce's Favorite Prescription has been tested in thirty years of practice. It is healing, southing, strugthening. It is perfectly natural in its operation and effect.
