The uprising of the "fanaries" in northern Brazil has become so serious as to create apprehension at Rio de Janeiro. The bodies of government troops that were sent against them at first, proved inadequate for the suppression of the revolt, and heavy reinforcements have this month been transported to the region of the war. In such small engagements as have already taken place the fanatics fought furlowely, and their fanaticism was intelsified by the success which they gained. This caused the government to send into the state of Bahla a military force so large that it ought to be able to deal with thirty or forty thousand fanatics, however fanatic they may be. The leader of the revolt, Antonio Conselbeiro, is called by the Brazilians "ignorant man, child of the wilderness," and we have no reason to doubt that this is a correct description of him; yet all accounts agree that he exercises boundless influence over the hordes that have joined We may any day hear that he has been overthrown by the federal arm now massed near his camp; but s long as his adherents grow in number there is danger for Brazil. The republic has had hard experiences ever since it was formed, seven years ago, and it is most desirable for it that peace should be permanently establihed in all Its states.
