WOMAN'S REALM

THE FIELD OF THE GRUMBLER

Man Bewails Good and Bad Portune Alike --- Opportunities Unlimited.

Those to whom grumbling and growling are pleasures need never be dull for human naure being but a sadly defective kind of thing, and life being but an assortment of shreds and patches, opportunities for growling are almost as many as there are circumstances and the day of the grumbler is one that has no end. The weather and the rates; the price of wheat, the infamy of the Unspeakable; the ubiquity of the cyclist or the injusticof death; the new woman and the mod ern man-it matters not what the subjecmay be, from fashion to politics and from literature to servantgirlism, it is a fair field for growling and a rich hunting ground for the grumbler-that modern version of the ancient sybarite who fell foul of the rose leaves when they were crumpled and not smooth.

The grumbler is a being in whose composition hope has been left out and cheerfulness has no place, while pessimism and with white silk and gold for the centers. despair divide the field between them.
