A startling incident of which Mr. John Oliver, of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually to back and sides, no appetite-gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Formunately, a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters,' and to my great joy and improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man.
