Astoria has a Push Club which is a credit to the community. It is an expansion society, and not a political push.

The article in yesterday's Oregonian on Astoria is a strong one. It states so many truths and is written in such a sensitive vein, that the Astorian would be very loath to belittle it.

It appears from interviews with the higher Spanish naval officers captured at Santiago that they look forward to nothing from the government which they have recently been serving save reprimands and disgrace.

Admiral Cervera is quoted as saying that life holds nothing further for him, while of Captain Eulate, late of the Victoria, it is said that, having no independent income, he is deeply despondent in contemplating his future.

No more severe indictment could well be drawn against that nation than that it will refuse to honor the men whose only offense is that they were placed in command of ships which in battle proved inferior to those of the enemy.

HUMORS OF THE CAMPAIGN.

What might be called one of the humors of the campaign in Cuba is the reported remarks of General Calixto Garcia in an interview with Mr. Thomas W. Steeps, the American war correspondent.

It would be interesting to learn something further of General Garcia's ideas of what he meant by an equal basis. The American government is spending about a million a day in this war.

OUR TERRITORIAL EXPANSION.

The change of public sentiment effected by the war with Spain with respect to the territorial expansion of the United States is little short of marvelous.

It is little short of marvelous. It is almost incomprehensible that in a night, as it were, the principles and prejudices born and bred of a century of ripe experience could be wiped away and completely forgotten.

The disposition to accept the position into which we are practically forced is very strong. It seems almost as if destiny had decreed that it should be so, that we were simply fulfilling a predestined end.

Think of the vast extent of empire that awaits us. Almost as great as England's, the sun never sets upon it. Webster's apostrophe to England, his famous, "Drum beat around the world," applies equally to it.

BARBARIC SPANISH TRAITS.

There is a yellow streak in humanity that makes it want to blame all its trouble on others.

Persons troubled with diarrhoea will be interested in the experience of Mr. W. M. Bush, clerk of Hotel Danmore, Providence, R. I.
