Frank Woolsey, agent of the Pacific Coast Steamship Company, is in the city. President J. J. Hill of the Great Northern Railway Company, will arrive on the coast tomorrow. The George W. Elder will be placed on the San Francisco-Portland run about the first of September. Wm. Frank Schmidt, a native of Germany, was admitted to citizenship in the county court yesterday. Miss Louisa Birnie and Miss Andrea, of Cathlamet, are visiting in the city and registered at the Occident. If you want a piano, see Allan, 128 Commercial street. This is positively the last week of his stay in Astoria. The annual meeting of the board of directors of the O. R. & N. Co. will be held in Portland on Thursday next. The case of the tug Miami, libeled Saturday last by creditors, will be settled and the boat released in a few days. Patrick Shea and Mrs. Shea returned from their honeymoon trip to California Saturday night on the A. & C. R. R. The merry-go-round, the last of the side show to leave the city, was shipped to Salem last night, leaving only numerous small boys to mourn its loss. A moonlight excursion will be given by the M. E. church on the steamer Miller Friday evening, September 2. Friends of the church and the public generally are invited. The West Shore Mills company have just received a large lot of air conditioned lumber, Astoria and Ilwaco until and including September 15, leaving Ilwaco on the last trip up river September 11. An impromptu party was given last evening at Kerney's hall by the Misses Kerney and Miss M. McCann. The evening was pleasantly spent, dancing, games and refreshments occupying the time. The friends of J. M. Brownell, who has been the day clerk at the Imperial hotel, Portland, ever since its opening, four and a half years ago, will be pleased to learn that he has been appointed to a very flattering position as day clerk at the Hotel Portland. Captain Thomas, of the British ship Rockaway, which arrived in Saturday 12 days from Yokohama, spoke the British ship Penthesella August 4, from Shanghai to Royal Roads for orders. The Penthesella is listed for the Columbia river to load wheat. Postmaster Wise and family leaves for Knappa today for a few days outing. Mr. Wise returns this evening to make arrangements to turn over the postoffice to his successor, Mr. Charles Donald, tomorrow evening. Work will soon commence on the new Page building on the corner of Twelfth son will see a through there even larger than this year. County Judge Gray and Commissioners Peterson and Lewis, who have been through the Nehalem inspecting county roads and bridges, report the valley looking in fine condition. Crops have been unusually large this year and the farmers are well buoyed. They report a new survey will be necessary on the road between Jewell and Grand Rapids. The extension of the road from Grand Rapids to Elsie will be settled by changing the proposed route, which will be done at the October term of the county court.

A very large and enthusiastic gathering of the Progressive Association held its usual weekly meeting last night. Among other subjects that came up for discussion was the flour mill proposition, and a committee was appointed to investigate the reliability of the parties and also to assist in raising a subsidy. The following are the committee: G. W. Lounsbury, J. N. Griffin, H. G. Van Dusen, E. A. Taylor and W. L. Root. In discussing the advantages of the mill a prominent dairyman said it would be a big advantage, as the mill would furnish cheap feed for the cattle of the surrounding farmers. A communication came before the meeting from Henry E. Dosh, one of the Omaha exposition commissioners, stating that he had received a copy of the Astoria Astorian souvenir edition and asking that 500 be sent to him at Omaha. The association ordered the said number of copies. The following gentlemen were elected members of the association: W. G. Goshell and M. J. Kinney.

SPANISH BULLETS FLEW THICK.

Lieutenant Haines' Account of His Engagement at Porto Rico.

NEW YORK, August 29.—Lieutenant Haines, commanding an artillery platoon under Captain Potts, in Porto Rico, was wounded on August 12 the day the war ended. He is now in St. Luke's hospital in this city. Talking with his brother, Captain Jenkins Haines, who was at his bedside, he said:

"The day regarding this affair was very confusing. I spoke of Lieutenant Haines being 'struck by a stray Mauser bullet. Not serious.' This was misleading, as it might lead one to suppose my battery was not in action and that my attention was under the auspices of several other men were wounded and two killed. "I was sent out in advance along the San Juan road to find a position from which we could entangle the Spanish position from which a heavy fire had been received. The Spanish volleys coming with remarkable regularity and precision. On the morning of August 12, Captain Potts was ordered to proceed up the San Juan road with five inch guns for the purpose of shelling the Spanish trenches at Asomanta. "Four guns, which included my platoon, were moved into position in a field near the San Juan road at a range of 200 yards to our right on the road. "Just before we came into action the enemy opened on us with five volleys and two three in howitzers. This brought us into action. We picked up the range immediately and did splendid practice. The two howitzers were soon silenced and the Spaniards were seen running from their intrenchments. "Then we silenced our fire and shortly after we did the enemy took heart and began to return. General Wilson sent me with a gun some distance up the road in advance of the rest to try and entangle the enemy. I proceeded up the road on horseback about 200 yards and found a company of Wisconsin infantry in a bend of the road, which formed a cover from the Spanish fire. I passed beyond them and the gun was unlimbered in the next turn in the road. My men lay down by the roadside to escape the Spanish volleys, which were coming up the road in our front and right. Some of my men told me the enemy were advancing within 20 yards in force and that we must get out or lose the gun.

"The firing at this time was very heavy, the Mausers coming in a storm with each volley. I told the sergeant not to waste a try at them for luck anyhow and as I could see no Spaniards nearer than 50 or 60 yards, I had him run the gun out on the road a little. We had no sooner done this than the fire suddenly increased so that the gun could not be served. We hauled the gun back to the next turn in the road where we were joined by the second gun, still unable to do any great execution owing to the sheltered position of the enemy. The fire continued with fierceness, but from our new position we brought a house in view. I had the gun instantly trained upon it. I saw several Spaniards there outside of it and felt certain it was not empty. "The very first shot landed fairly on its side, and penetrating, burst inside, sending things flying. The enemy broke cover and I turned to the sergeant, saying: "That was a good one, now give them another." "As I turned something struck me through the body. I knew I was badly hurt, but felt no pain. It was like being struck over the shoulder with a club. I passed my hand to my side and brought it away full of blood. "The sergeant saw me and ran to my side. 'They've got me this time,' I said, and he put his arm around me and led me away and let me lie down."

DUTIES AT SANTIAGO.

Blanco Will Regulate Spanish Tariff at Havana.

NEW YORK, August 29.—A dispatch to the Herald from Santiago de Cuba says: "General Blanco has sent a cable message to General Toral, asking what duties have been imposed at Santiago, with a view to regulating the tariffs at Havana. At the request of the merchants, Customs Collector Donaldson has asked General Lawton to decide whether or not duty paid on goods entered at the port of Santiago shall be refunded on re-shipment to such ports as Cienfuegos and Manzanillo, which are still in possession of the Spaniards. "Plans are being prepared and surveys made for a street sewerage scheme in Santiago. "For the prisoners having no counsel General Wilson has detailed Major Walton, of the 1st New York, to act in that capacity. This is the first trial of a civilian by a military court since the occupation of the islands.

THE POPE'S HEALTH.

NEW YORK, August 29.—A dispatch to the World from London says: "The Daily News' Rome correspondent says he was assured at the Vatican that the pope had recovered from his indisposition. "Precautions have, of course, been augmented and he is surrounded by every care. He is not allowed to act in that capacity. The pope is recovering from his indisposition. "Precautions have, of course, been augmented and he is surrounded by every care. He is not allowed to act in that capacity. The pope is recovering from his indisposition.

Looks Good.

Meat may look good, but is it? Some people can tell good meat when they see it. They can say whether it is tender by feeling it, but nine people out of ten can't. If your purchase is made of us you may rest assured the meat is all right and if it's not the very best when it's served, it's in the cooking.
