

LOCAL NOTES

Just whistle for Whistle.

Drink Western Brew; it's good for you.

Ed Miles spent Monday in Boardman.

Parent Teachers' Association will meet May 2nd.

Wm. Finnell is on the sick list the past few days.

W. H. Stewart made a business trip to Portland Friday.

Mrs. P. Siseell of Hermiston spent the week-end as guest of Mrs. Ballenger.

Rev. Amos of Portland will conduct services at the church Saturday and Sunday.

Get a new umpire. Throw him out. Clean him, etc., etc. Umpires should be prize fighters.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrews and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Merchie spent Sunday at the home of J. C. Ballenger.

Miss Helen Cowgill, Home Economics Instructor of O. A. C., will lecture at the school on the afternoon of May 2nd. All parents are urged to be present.

Mrs. Kiltz has returned from Pendleton where she underwent an operation. She is much improved and her friends expect to see her about in the very near future.

Royal Rands took the count of three strikes and out at the heels of a horse Monday. The appearance of his nose would indicate that he was entitled to a walk but you know umpires of today make some queer decisions.

The Busy Gleaners met at the home of Mrs. Crawford last week. Those present were Mesdames Wicklander, Dillabaugh, Mulkey, Ray Brown and Hendricks. All ladies of the grange and their friends are invited to meet with them at the home of Mrs. Wicklander on the second Wednesday in May.

Don't miss the Hard Times jollification tonight at Umatilla.

The Seven Stages of Man.

All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players;
They have their exits and their entrances;
And one man in his time plays many parts,
His act being seven ages. At first the infant,
Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms.
Then the whining school boy, with his satchel
And shining morning face, creeping like snail
Unwillingly to school. And then the lover,
Sighing like a furnace with a woeful ballad
Made to his mistress' eyebrow. Then a soldier,
Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the pard,
Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel,
Seeking the bubble reputation
Even in the cannon's mouth. And then the justice,
In fair round belly with good capon lin'd,
With eyes severe and beard of formal cut,
Full of wise saws and modern instances;
And so he plays his part. The sixth age shifts
Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloon,
With spectacles on nose and pouch on side,
His youthful hose, well sav'd, a world too wide
For his shrunk shank; and his big manly voice,
Turning again toward childish treble, pipes
And whistles in his sound. Last scene of all
That ends this strange eventful history,
In second childishness and mere oblivion,
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans everything.

—Shakespeare.

The first stage of man is the infant, reaching for everything he sees and putting everything he gets in his mouth, and crying if you take them away from him. He is always trying to climb on something. He likes to throw his playthings on the floor so that someone will have to pick them up and he can throw them down again.

The second stage of man is the schoolboy. He is a mischievous chap who likes to tease the girls with bugs and lizards. He is always hungry. The first thing he thinks of when he comes home from school is something to eat. If you have something particularly nice hid away for your self he is sure to find it. He hears all the secrets the big sister tells her friends and does not hesitate to tell the other boys.

The third stage of man is the lover. He has a disgusting habit of blushing whenever his lady love's name is mentioned. He is very particular about his clothes. He always wears a tie and his hair is combed to perfection. His one ambition is to have a car or a friend who has one. He does not like to work because she might come by and see him. If he does not have money to keep her supplied with candy and flowers, and to take her to shows and dances he is very blue.

The fourth stage is the young business man. He is married and has a little home he is working to pay for. He is beginning to sober down and find what business really is. He feels a great deal of responsibility and takes it very seriously. He is working to buy a car and has no time for the social welfare of the community.

The fifth stage is the middle-aged business man. He has reached a high point in the business world and is able to sit and watch his bank account grow and dream of the time when he and his family may quit work and may have the pleasures they have missed in the years of toil.

The sixth stage is the gentleman of leisure. He has reached the height of his ambition. His working days are over and he has time to think of other things. His children are happily married and he and his wife may travel and do the things they have always wanted to do and never had time. One of the first things is to visit his old home.

The seventh stage of man is his second childhood. He is an old, grey-haired man. His principal amusement is to tell his grandchildren of the things that happened when he was a child, and to wish for the good old days.

—Ethel Broyles, '23.

Belle's Father: "You love my daughter?"

Lauren: "Love her!" he exclaimed passionately, "Why I would die for her. For one soft glance from those sweet eyes I would hurl myself from yonder cliff and perish—a bruised mass upon the rocks 200 feet below!"

The old man shook his head. "I'm something of a liar myself," he said, "and one is enough for a small family like mine."

Paul: "Money talks, I tell you." Roy: "Yes, but it never gives itself away."

Odessa: "The man I marry must be a hero."

Leroy: "He will be."

Paul: "Wilma, aren't you cold with the kilt?"

Wilma (shivering): "No, but I'm high kilt with the cold."

Lauren: "There seems to be no question that divides public opinion more than annexation. Are you in favor of it?"

Belle: "It is rather sudden, but if you're willing, I am."

The Japanese address letters the reverse of what we do, writing the country first, the state or province next, then the city, the street and number, and the name last of all.

By different nations every day in the week is set apart for worship. Sunday by the Christians, Monday by the Greeks, Tuesday by the Persians, Wednesday by the Assyrians, Thursday by the Egyptians, Friday by the Turks, and Saturday by the Jews.

The oldest school in the world is at Peking. It is called the "School for the Sons of the Empire."

Curious Advertisements.

"Annual sale now on. Don't go elsewhere to be cheated—come in here!"

"Wanted—A boy to be partly outside and partly behind the counter."

"For Sale—A piano, the property of a musician with carved legs."

"Bulldog for sale; will eat anything; very fond of children."

Thank You.

The play caste and Miss Runner wish to take this opportunity to thank those kind friends of Boardman who so generously supplied our needs in stage properties and costumes, and made possible the successful production of the play. The Ballengers and the Gorhams merit special mention.
