GRAIN FIRE LOSSES HEAVY THIS YEAR

Olympia, Wash.—Fire losses in the grain fields of eastern Washington are heavier this year than in many seasons. Captain W. A. Gross, assistant state fire marshal stated on his return from two months of active fighting of fires in the grain fields of the Walla Walla and Palouse districts.

The fires have been greater in number and have been harder to control, due to the extremely dry and hot season, with the resultant heavy foliage on the grain. Two fires in the Walla Walla district recently destroyed two fields of 700 and 755 acres of grain, respectively.

One of these fires was directly traceable to a lighted match or a cigarette stub carelessly thrown from a passing automobile.

Second to this menace was the accumulation of smut dust in threshing machines, the smut being unusually heavy. Explosions of this dust caused by sparks of static electricity were frequent and caused heavy losses.

The Sheep-Header's Pay.
A telegram from Kalispell, Mont. (a town of wide horizons and wide-arched sky or fox-glove blue), brings sad news and good. The wages of sheep-headers have fallen with a dull thud from $100 a month to $80, but the number of herders is just the same. For here is a life where the wage never was in cash, but rather in that satisfaction men get from far and lonely places, where no elevated trains rattle overhead, and no shrill whistles are "shagged" by the police. To the sheep-header the prairie and the rolling lowlands must ever be the sea to him who longs for the sea. This week and next the little wagons will go off, one by one, into the loneliness and delight of vast Montana. Even at only $80 per month many will flock their whip as they start and say: "This is the life!"—Christian Science Monitor.

Fine Engineering Work.
A notable feat in road engineering was the recent repair in New Mexico of a section of concrete highway that had been undermined by heavy rains. The engineer of the United States bureau of public roads first placed a shield of brush alongside the guard against further washing, and then quickly substituted a solid built-under bed for the damaged portion of the foundation. Sagging concrete slabs were brought into proper position on wooden stringers raised by hand-operated jacks. All loosened parts of the roadbed were then filled in with wet sand and this was firmly consolidated with a heavy ram worked by four men. Cribbing was placed under the stringers before the jacks were removed. The concrete slabs proved of high quality, and are said to have withstood setting and restoration without development of crack or flaw.
